Major Issues To Follow Heavy Backlog

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trudeau government said today it is deeply committed to creation of a just society but warned that the goal cannot be accomplished overnight.

In the Speech from the Throne read by Governor-General Michener at the opening of the 28th Parliament, the government set out a list of "backlog" measures it hopes to pass this session.

As Prime Minister Trudeau had forecast, the speech contained little new or surprising.

But it did include a preview of long-range aims.

See Complete Text Page 37

Removal of the substantial legislative backlog, it said, will free Parliament so that it can come to grips with difficult and pressing problems relating to youth, poverty, regional disparities, urban growth, individual welfare, and the application and encouragement of scientific technology."

The speech did not make clear whether measures on these problems will be brought down in the current session.

But it said the government has planned its program for the session "in the context of a Parliament of normal duration."

Solutions to these problems can only be achieved on the basis of co-operation with provincial and municipalities, the speech said.

In this connection it revived a proposal by former prime minister Pearson for an institute to carry on "long-term research and thinking" into govenmental matters of all kinds.

The speech did not say that such an institute would be set up, however, but only that it would be "useful to have one available" to all governments.

The 3,000-word speech, read in alternating English and French to senators and MPs assembled in the Senate chamber, said there are great expectations across Canada of what the 28th Parliament will produce.

Step by Step Method Stressed

But it cautioned:

"It is a simple fact of life that everything cannot be done at once."

The speech sketched plans for legislation on a number of matters left over from the last Parliament or promised during the June election campaign.

They included reform of the Criminal Code, an official languages bill, review of prices and costs, consumer protection, manpower programs and a regional development department.

The speech also touched on individual freedoms and efforts to combat poverty but cautioned that there is no instant remedy for poverty.

It said:

"My government is deeply concerned to provide and to ensure increased justice, dignity and recognition to the individual, particularly in an age which is characterized by large governments, industrial automation, social regimentation and old-fashioned laws."

A great deal had been accomplished in recent years to make Canadian society more just in terms of income distribution and security, but poverty continued to exist.

"My government recognizes that, but it also believes it would be deluding and cruel to pretend that there is a simple, all-encompassing or instantaneously effective remedy."

Poverty could only be dealt with through determined action by all governments, but the federal government would take the lead wherever it could properly do so through the regional development department.

Other measures relating to a just society would include the Criminal Code amendments, new protections for consumers and investors, up-to-date food, drug and health legislation, changes in the machinery of justice and removal of injustices involving labor.

The last item referred to revival of a controversial bill to change the structure of the Canada Labor Relations Board and insert in labor law a reference to regional bargaining units.

The throne speech also laid heavy stress on productivity, saying Canada could not have the basis of a poverty-free society unless it maintained an efficient, competitive and productive economy.

It was in this context that proposals would be introduced for a "systematic and continuous review of prices and costs in our economy."

The government itself was carefully selecting programs it considered best for promotion of a prosperous economy.

Grain Strike Pact Agreed

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor and management negotiators for 1,300 striking Lakehead grain handlers and their 10 employers hammered out a settlement in tough, night-long bargaining early today at the insistence of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

Mr. Mackasey announced the settlement at 5:50 a.m., EDT after apparently going over the heads of management negotiators to deal directly with company presidents by long-distance telephone.

Union negotiators said they would recommend unanimous ratification at a meeting at the Lakehead this weekend.

The settlement calls for wage increases of 45 cents retroactive to last Jan. 1 and 15 cents each half year starting next Jan. 1—a total of $1.05 spread over the three-year life of a new contract.

The union originally sought $1.06 spread over two years, and the companies' last offer was $1.00 over three years, with 75 cents of it to be paid in two years.

A company spokesman said the settlement amounted to a 45.6 per cent increase over three years.

Other unsettled issues in the strike are to be submitted voluntarily to an arbitration board appointed by the companies, the unions and the labor minister.

SETTLEMENT LARGE

The grain handlers' hourly average wage has been $2.50. Mr. Mackasey noted that the increases in the settlement are weighted heavily "on the near side," and said it was a large settlement in relation to others that have been negotiated recently.

"But in these particular circumstances it was necessary for the grain handlers to catch up. The union has been frozen into a three-year contract while other workers have been getting increases in the past two years."

Czech Resignation

BELGRADE (Reuters) — The official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported today that Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek of Czechoslovakia has resigned.

The Cryptic Returns!

"Heav'n has no rage like love to hatred turn'd,
Nor Hell a fury, like a woman scorn'd."

Seventeenth century playwright William Congreve should be living today to experience the rage and fury of Times' Cryptic Crossword Puzzle fans deprived of their thrice-weekly diet of cerebral entertainment.

Monday's Times, minus the Cryptic, was barely off the press before our switchboard started lighting up like a Christmas tree with anxious calls. The situation eased off Tuesday, a non-puzzle day; but when Wednesday's Times came out, again without the Crytic, the barrage resumed in earnest.

Under the circumstances there is only one thing to do—admit we goofed and put the Cryptic Crossword back. It will appear again Friday in its accustomed place on the comic page, and regularly Monday, Wednesday and Friday from now on so long as it is available.

An interesting question remains.

What is it about these puzzles which arouse such intense loyalty among the aficionados?

Here is a sampling of comments from Times' subscribers who called to protest the cancellation:

"The cleverest puzzle of its type I've every come across." "It provides hours of enjoyment, sometimes even days." "You really have to exercise your brain to solve this one." "The Cryptic is always a real challenge ... the solutions are logical and intelligent." "I think it's a real education."

Could it be that Times' readers who haven't tried the Cryptic are missing something?.

English Rights Demanded

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands of Montreal parents and school children paraded quietly around Parliament Hill today demanding bilingual schools in Quebec.

The column of placard-carrying marchers grew steadily as busload after busload from Montreal unloaded protesters at the foot of the Hill.

The delegation, expected to number about 8,000, is protesting first moves in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard to make the language of school instruction French only.

Many of the delegation are recent immigrants from Europe who want their children to learn both English and French in their new homeland. Italian was the dominant language heard among the marchers.

The demonstration was timed to coincide with the opening of the 28th Parliament today. A similar demonstration is planned for Quebec City when the provincial legislature opens.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Montreal area cabinet ministers and MPs will meet the leaders of the demonstration.

Injury Halts Trek

LONDON (AP) — A British expedition attempting the first surface crossing of the Arctic Ocean headed back over the ice today with an injured team member. Radio messages said Geophysicist Allan Gill, 37, had fallen into a hole and injured his back.

Travelling in dog sleds, the four Britons were reported heading for their summer base camp, about 170 miles from a drifting United States Navy research station. London sponsors of the expedition said the injured man probably would be evacuated by plane from the camp.

Hijack Suspect Faces Day in Court

MONTREAL (CP)—A six-foot Negro from Texas was to appear in court in suburban Dorval this afternoon to answer charges relating to an attempt Wednesday to hijack an Air Canada Viscount turboprop aircraft en route to Toronto from Saint John, N.B.

The man—who identified himself as Charles Lavern Beasley, 22, of Dallas—was held for questioning after RCMP and Air Canada officials assured him he would receive "asylum" and would be better off to remain in Canada instead of forcing the plane to go to Cuba.

As the police at Dorval prepared to lay charges, on the advice of the immigration department, United States authorities were also investigating the case.

The FBI said they had a warrant for the arrest of a man named Charles Lavern Beasley for a $14,000 August holdup of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank at Ladonia, Tex.

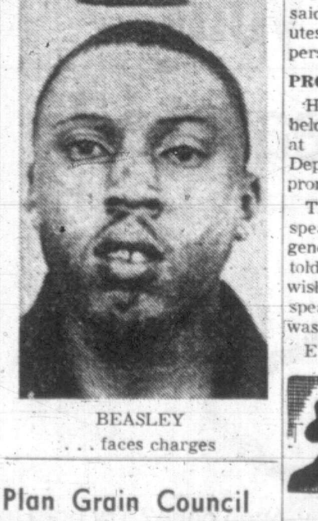
The man held here, who booked the flight in Halifax under the name of Garvey, made a statement that he was wanted by the Central Intelligence Agency of the U.S. because he was a member of the militant Black Power movement.

FIRST FOR AIRLINE

The mid-air drama, the first hijacking attempt in Air Canada's 31-year-history, began a few minutes after the plane took off from Saint John.

The man, holding a .22 Colt revolver at the head of a stewardess and pushing her before him into the aircraft's flight deck, ordered pilot Capt. Ronald Hollett of Toronto to change course.

But Capt. Hollett and first officer Robert Bromley of Ottawa convinced him the aircraft needed to be refuelled for a flight to Cuba and the man agreed to a stop in Montreal.



BEASLEY
. . . faces charges

After the refuelling was completed, the man appeared to change his mind about going to Cuba and he spoke with RCMP Assistant Commissioner Raoul Carriere over the radio.

The assistant commissioner said he spoke for about 20 minutes with the man, trying to persuade him to surrender.

PROMISES ASYLUM

He assured the hijacker—who held the plane's two-man crew at gun-point—that the Justice Department in Ottawa had promised to grant him asylum.

The man had also asked to speak with the Cuban consul-general in Montreal, but he was told the consul-general did not wish to come the airport to speak to him because the man was not a Cuban citizen.

Eventually, the man agreed to turn over his gun to the pilot and the assistant commissioner, accompanied by RCMP staff-sergeant Leo Liboiron, walked unarmed to the plane.

The man was then taken into custody.

Initial questioning was conducted exclusively by immigration officials, but Air Canada and suburban Dorval police joined the interrogation later.

The hijacking of the plane caused so little commotion that many passengers were unaware of anything unusual happening.

Stewardess Christine Waud, 23, of Notre Dame de Lourdes, Man., was the first to be warned by the gunman.

He pointed his revolver at her head and then made the second stewardess, Beverly Atkinson, 26, of Vancouver, walk ahead of him to the flight deck.

France Ignored Earlier Warning

By Times Ottawa Bureau
(See stories Page 39)

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau reacted strongly to Philipe Rossillon's activities in Manitoba because the same agent of the French government carried on similar activities in New Brunswick last fall, a government spokesman said today.

The Canadian government at that time privately warned the French government to cease such under-handed activities.

When President Charles de Gaulle ignored that warning and the same man was sent to Manitoba to try to organize a trip to France of a number of leading French Canadian residents of Manitoba Mr. Trudeau denounced the activities publicly.

The French ambassador to Canada Pierre Siraud called on under secretary of state Marcel Cadieux Wednesday. Recently arrived in Canada the ambassador was paying his customary "courtesy call" on Mr. Cadieux. The Rossillon affair was discussed at length.

The French embassy in reply to reporters enquiries was still contending today that Mr. Rossillon's visit here was "private" and entirely "unofficial." Mr. Rossillon who is head of French government's special committee for the defence and expansion of the French language is reported to have left Quebec City apparently for France Wednesday.

French Spy Network In Quebec Claimed

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says a former senior officer in the French secret service claims France is operating a spy network in Quebec.

Phillipe Thraud de Vosjoli, a former colonel in the Service de documentation exterieure et de contre-espionnage, is quoted as saying French intelligence operators in the United States received orders in 1958 to start concentrating on Quebec.

That was the year President de Gaulle came to power.

However, the newspaper says, much of what de Vosjoli knows is five years out of date, although he thinks "there is no reason to believe that there have been drastic changes."

De Vosjoli quit the French service five years ago and now lives "in relative obscurity in the southern United States," the Telegram says.

INFILTRATED

He is quoted as saying he quit the French service, in which he served for 12 years as liaison between Paris and Washington, because the French service was becoming infiltrated by Soviet spies.

During his tour of duty in Washington, the newspaper says, de Vosjoli received orders from Paris to set up a secret network to gather military and missile information from the Americans. It was this network which later was ordered into Quebec.

Drug Costs Action Indicated by Gov't

OTTAWA (CP) — The government signalled its intention Thursday of reintroducing legislation intended to ease the cost of drugs through freer importation.

The legislative outline in the throne speech read at the opening of Parliament provided no details of the legislation, generally expected to follow the major lines of a bill left unpassed when Parliament was dissolved for the June 25 general election.

Under that bill, patent laws were to be changed to reduce protection against imports. This was expected to create more competition among manufacturers and to lower consumer prices.

Informants have indicated the new bill also will provide special assurance of the safety and effectiveness of drug imports.

The throne speech simply said the government plans "to update food, drug and health legislation" without saying how this is to be done.

Getting to College By 12 Is Rather Early

NEW YORK (AP) — Matthew Marcus finished grade school in five years and high school in two. Today, at the age of 12, he is a freshman at City College.

I expect the students and professors to stare and ask me questions at first," said Matthew, five feet tall and freckle faced. "But after a while I hope they will accept me for what I know, in spite of my age."

Matthew, who has an extraordinary aptitude for science and mathematics, is believed to be the youngest student to enter City College in this century.

By the fifth grade of elementary school in Greenburgh, Westchester County, his genius was recognized and he was sent on to Woodland High School in Hartsdale, N.Y.

Dr. Jack Novk, the school psychiatrist, suggested college after two years at Woodland. Prof. Harry Lustig, City College physics chairman, tutored Matthew Saturday morning this summer and agreed.

Matthew, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Marcus, will be studying advanced calculus, honors courses in English and physics, his probable major, and conducting independent chemistry research under a selected-students program for talented undergraduates,

Rooftop Sniper

NEW YORK (AP) — Police said a rooftop sniper fired two shots at a patrol car stopped at a Brooklyn intersection today. But the two policemen inside escaped with only minor cuts from flying glass and bullet fragments.

Mass Walkout In Smith Party Jolts Rhodesia

SALISBURY (AP) — An entire branch of the governing Rhodesian Front has resigned from the party, it was announced today.

Joseph Twigg, chairman of the Salisbury Central Constituency Council, representing the 74 party members who resigned, said: "I am totally opposed to the prime minister."

The mass defection by the Salisbury central members followed the resignation from the cabinet Wednesday of Lord Graham, external affairs and defence minister.

Graham resigned because he said he could not see eye to eye with Smith on policy—mainly racial.

He was the second man to leave the Smith cabinet in two months. Internal Affairs Minister William Harper, an ally of Graham, was dismissed by Smith.

But Graham made it clear he was not leaving the Rhodesian Front party or Parliament, as Harper did.

SPARKS OPPOSITION

The opposition to Smith's policies from far-right critics intensified four days ago at a congress of the Rhodesian Front.

Smith's proposed constitution for Rhodesia, which would have separate procinaial assemblies for black Africans and whites, did not go far enough for many and there were reports of large-scale defections.

Only 11 votes saved Smith from defeat at the hands of rebellious members voting against the constitutional plans drawn up by the 100-member party executive.

The far-rightists object to the part of the constitution draft which proposes an interim multi-racial Senate and a lower house.

They believe this is dangerously close to being a basis on which talks could be resumed with Britain to settle the independence issue, with the likelihood of the separate assemblies never taking shape.

Smith declared independence from Britain rather than grant majority rule to Rhodesia's 4,000,000 black Africans.

The Smith constitution provided for a National Assembly. Its members would be elected on the basis of payment of income tax. This virtually would exclude black Africans as only a fractional minority of them earn enough to pay taxes.

Mercy Flights Cut

GENEVA (Reuters) — International Red Cross mercy flights into Biafra were almost cut by half Wednesday night, apparently because of Nigerian military advances and bad weather, informed sources said today.

Five Red Cross flights delivered 42 tons of relief supplies Wednesday night, compared with nine flights and 72 tons the night before, they said.

IWA Strike Fund Sparks Debate

(See story Page 39)

VANCOUVER (CP) — Introduction of two resolutions at the Western Canadian convention of the International Woodworkers of America Wednesday gave some delegates another chance to snipe at rival leadership slates.

One resolution, approved despite demands from several men that the question be handled immediately, calls for a special convention no later than Jan. 31 to deal with the union's depleted strike fund.

Ernie Freer, president of the loggers' local and a backer of Syd Thompson, rival to regional president Jack Moore, said the question should be delayed so members wouldn't be confused by strike fund and election votes at the same convention.

Max Salter, president of the Courtenay local on Vancouver Island, said the Thompson-Freer slate of candidates is afraid that a strike fund assessment vote might hinder its chances of being elected.

"PAPER USED"

Mr. Freer introduced the second motion that said the IWA newspaper is being used as a campaign instrument "by certain regional officers." That was a reference to the incumbent Moore slate of officers.

The motion was ruled out of order. A roll call vote over-ruled the chairman's decision and the resolution went to committee. That means it'll be back on the convention floor.

The strike fund resolution seeks recommendations on how to pay out from the fund—and build it up.

It slipped to little more than $1,000,000 from almost $4,000,000 in a 7½-month strike in the B.C. Interior that ended in March.

Several of the 200 delegates suggested a fund of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 will be needed as a "war chest" to back up joint negotiations in 1970 by Interior and Coast locals.

Other members said the fund could be turned into a political issue if a vote on assessments were held at the same time as members were casting votes for regional officers.

Delegates passed a resolution urging abolition of British Columbia legislation which provides for compulsory arbitration "aimed at destroying the union's effectiveness to use the strike."

Three resolutions linked to housing costs were passed.

One asked the B.C. Federation of Labor to promote creation of a department of housing and urban affairs, press for rent review boards and, among other things, seek subsidized mortgage rates.

Other resolutions seek abolition of the 11 per cent federal sales tax on building materials and request governments to control land values and land speculators.

VANCOUVER (CP)— Service was restored to normal today on Canadian National Railways main line at Langley, following derailment of the CNR's Super-Continental Wednesday.

Picket Lines Freeze Three High Schools

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Striking high school students here set up picket lines around three Roman Catholic schools today to support their protest against a three-shift system of classes started this fall.

"We will not be shifted," read some of the placards paraded around Brother Rice, Gonzaga and Holy Heart of Mary high schools after a spontaneous walkout by some 2,000 students Wednesday.

A few of the estimated 7,000 students enrolled at the school were crossing picket lines this morning, to mild abuse by the picketers.

Students held their third rally early today to hand out placards and plead with followers to understand it was a serious protest, not just a holiday.

"If you're not going to support us seriously, we don't want you here," shouted Derek Payne, 17, of Brother Rice, one of the leaders at the rally in a school parking lot today.

STAGE HUGE MARCH

The students staged the biggest protest ever seen here Wednesday when 2,000 of them marched on Confederation Building, demanded and received an impromptu meeting with Premier Smallwood and arranged to talk with him again today.

Forces Pulled Back By N. Viet Command

SAIGON (AP) — Two small skirmishes were reported on the fringes of Tay Ninh City today and Viet Cong troops ambushed a United States convoy farther out. But U.S. advisers said it appears that Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces have pulled back for the moment.

The fighting was reported on the southwestern and southeastern edges of the city as 2,000 South Vietnamese paratroops and marines swept through areas that Viet Cong and North Vietnamese infiltrators had occupied Wednesday.

Fourteen Viet Cong troops and one American soldier were reported killed today in the ambush of the U.S. convoy.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 22 Viet Cong soldiers have been killed in fighting at Tay Ninh, 45 miles northwest of Saigon, since Wednesday. Government losses were put at 13 killed and 91 wounded.

Elsewhere, Viet Cong gunners shelled Pleiku, capital of the central highlands.

Viet Cong gunners slammed 80 mortar rounds into Pleiku and three U.S. bases in the area. U.S. headquarters said five South Vietnamese civilians were wounded inside the city, while U.S. military casualties and damage were light.

In Saigon, the combined forces command reported that U.S., South Vietnamese and Communist casualties all dropped sharply last week, reflecting a slowdown in ground action after two weeks of intensified fighting. American casualties were 195 killed and 1,400 wounded, about half the total reported the week before.

The U.S. command reported 1,664 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were killed last week, less than half the losses reported for the previous week.

South Vietnamese casualties were 325 killed, 1,081 wounded and 60 missing, also a marked drop.

LISBON (UPI)—British Columbia Premier Bennett arrived by plane today in company with a trade group for a four-day visit to Portugal.

Transport Office Blamed In Ship Crash

OTTAWA (CP) — The Exchequer Court of Canada has found the federal transport department to blame for the collision of two ocean freighters in the St. Lawrence River April 10, 1965. Three lives were lost.

The West German freighter Transatlantic, 5,521 tons, burned and sank after it was rammed in the side by the Dutch freighter Hermes. Two crew members and a passenger on the Transatlantic died when the vessel burst into flames.

A 142-page judgment issued Wednesday by Mr. Justice Camil Noel upheld a suit by the Transatlantic's owners against the transport department on grounds that a set of navigation lights on Lake St. Pierre were out of line and caused the accident.

The owners sought $5,000,000 in damages but the judge did not specify an award. This is to be settled by the court later after further representations by the parties.

The judgment dismissed another claim for the full recovery from the department of about $1,000,000 spent on salvaging and removing the sunken vessel. It said the pilot and officers of the Transatlantic should have beached the vessel and reduced the salvage problem. The Transatlantic burned for several hours before capsizing.

Troops Leave Czech Cities

Prague Cleared of Tanks

First Time Since Invasion

By GENE KRAMER

PRAGUE (AP)—Most occupation troops appeared today to be withdrawing from Czechoslovakia's major cities to new positions in the countryside. Downtown Prague was generally clear of Russian tank for the first time since the invasion three weeks ago.

The Soviets during the night evacuated the capital's last tank encampment, in a park between the main railway station and St. Wenceslas Skuare.

Similar evacuations were reported from Bratislava, Kosice and Brno, the latter preparing for several thousand foreign visitors to its annual international trade fair starting Sunday.

A number of planes were heard taking off from Prague during the night. This could indicate a thinning out of the Soviet troops, but there was no immediate confirmation.

Soviet military police were on the roads outside the capital, directing traffic, stopping trains and holding railway crossing gates open for convoys, jeeps and tanks.

HIDE FROM PUBLIC

A heavy concentration of airborne and armored troops remained near Prague's international airport, where most scheduled flights resumed this week. Occasional armored cars were still seen in the city and some tanks were still inside the Soviet Embassy's grounds, but they were hidden from public view.

The major part of the occupation force, estimated at 650,000 men at one time, was believed to be still in the country to back up political pressure being exerted on Czechoslovakia's liberal Communist leaders by Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily Kuznetsov of the Soviet Union.

Kuznetsov, who arrived last Friday, discussed "problems of mutual interest in the present context" Wednesday with Josef Smrkovsky, president of the National Assembly, Prague radio reported.

LEAVE IN STAGES

Under the agreement which President Ludvik Svoboda, Premier Oldrich Cernik and Communist Party Chief Alexander Dubcek negotiated in Moscow after the invasion, occupation troops are to be withdrawn in stages.

Soviet troops also are expected to remain indefinitely near the frontier with West Germany despite Prague's assurance that the Czechoslovak army can defend that border.

Censorship Of Press To Tighten

VIENNA (Reuters)—The Czechoslovak government will establish press control offices in a move to comply with the Soviet Union's request for tight press censorship.

The Czechoslovak news agency CTA said establishment of the offices will "help mass information media in fully respecting state interests by way of appropriate forms."

Western observers in Vienna said the offices, with headquarters in Prague and Bratislava, are expected to issue detailed daily directives on news coverage.

Information Minister Miroslav Galuska told committee members the government considers it necessary to use stronger influence on the mass media to ensure it does not threaten the interests of Czechoslovakia, "especially in regards to its international commitments," CTA said.

The proposed measures, described as temporary by CTA, were necessitated by the presence of the Warsaw pact forces in the country, Galuska said.

The bill will be debated at a plenary meeting of the National Assembly Friday.

Condition Good

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—RCMP Constable W. E. Bells, 24, shot in the hip and arm Tuesday, was listed in good condition in hospital Wednesday night. William Edward Mills, 26, of Vancouver, later was charged with wounding and breaking into two stores.

Start New Life Aim of Refugees

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 50 Czechoslovakians, most of whom were outside their country when Warsaw Pact troops invaded it last month, arrived at Montreal International Airport Wednesday to start a new life in Canada.

Prime Minister Trudeau expects 1,000 Czechs will come to Canada in the near future.

Mr. Trudeau told an Ottawa news conference Wednesday the government is considering allocating $2,000,000 to help persons fleeing from Czechoslovakia to make homes in this country.

He said the cabinet has agreed to an arrangement to facilitate their passage to Canada and thus help them settle more quickly.

The refugees who arrived here Wednesday were brought from Europe by Air Canada under a free-passage plan set up by the federal immigration department and are receiving financial aid from the government until they can find jobs here.

Nine Czechs arrived in Montreal Sunday. Most of those who arrived in the two airlifts plan to stay in Montreal. Others will go to Hamilton and Winnipeg.

ARRESTED LAST MONTH

Pavel Filko, 28, a factory foreman, said he operated an underground radio station at Dunaj, near Bratislava, before he was arrested by Soviet forces last month.

He had escaped his guards while being transported to jail and fled with the aid of Czech police to Austria.

Fishing for Answers

THERE IS NOT MUCH ARGUMENT about the fact that all is not well in the west coast salmon industry. Compared with the highly organized methods of the Soviet Union, for example, it appears inefficient. Too many men on too many costly boats are dividing too small a total income. The effect has been to help drive up the price of salmon, making it prohibitive in many homes and harder to sell in foreign markets.

Ask the fishermen or others in the industry for the solution to the problem, however, and agreement ends. There is a feeling that measures must be taken to keep a limit on the number of boats competing for the fish, but implementation of restrictions is not a simple matter that will please everyone. Nevertheless, Fisheries Minister Davis announced last week that the federal government is going to take action. It was a courageous move by the new minister, the first from the west coast to hold the portfolio in a number of years, because many fishermen will be resentful and the ultimate effects are incalculable.

The new licencing restrictions on boats will force out many marginal or part-time workers. Under the plan the government will grade fishboats on their annual catch. The fleet will be reduced immediately by about 1,000 boats which will be ineligible for licences because they recorded no commercial salmon landings last year. The number will then be further whittled by not allowing replacement of the least productive, or B class, vessels.

Some ramifications of this procedure are readily apparent and have already been criticized by the fishermen. It will tend to tighten control by the few major fishing companies who already own many of the boats. And it will mean the end of a way of life for many men content to live on a marginal income as long as they could enjoy the sense of freedom and independence which fishing offered. It used to be that a man could go into the woods and make a living as a hand-logger, but the giant forest management licences and company mergers put an end to that. Fishing has become the last refuge of British Columbia's rugged individualists.

There may also be hardship for those who through illness or bad luck failed to reach the standard last year, although Mr. Davis says a tribunal will be set up to hear grievances. The tribunal should be prepared to give weight to humanity as well as to economics. On the other hand, there are a number of positive aspects to the plan. It will tend to eliminate many abuses of the existing system. Some owners are said to have licensed their craft as fishboats without any intention to drop a line or net in the water, but simply as a dodge to obtain the cheaper fuel available to registered fishermen. Some men would work a short time, then claim unemployment insurance benefits. A smaller fleet will also make it easier for the department of fisheries to enforce conservation measures.

It is difficult to weigh the advantages against the disadvantages until the full effects of the new scheme become evident. But since it is clear that something had to be done, Mr. Davis' plan deserves a trial.

Make It Better Before It's Worse

PROTESTS WILL BE INEVITABLE, counter-proposals will be many, and costs undoubtedly will be higher. But the fact remains that a modern community cannot continue to foul its air, spoil a sizable neighborhood environment, and sponsor a possible health hazard through archaic treatment of garbage. Throwing it on the ground and burning it is obviously causing unacceptable conditions and we should face up to the fact that the procedure must be improved.

Once granted that inadequate methods of garbage disposal will not be tolerated, the problem then is two-fold: to devise a system that meets health and anti-pollution standards, and to ensure that it is the least expensive method that can be obtained. Until now the arrangements have been primitive. The December 31 deadline set by the Board of Health for abandonment of the present system brings the matter to a head.

But we should not then stumble into any alternative that seems handy: the regional board's committee should use its powers to complete a full and definitive study of modern garbage disposal systems before making a choice of the most feasible. As this region's population continues to increase, the problem of garbage disposal will be a major one. Let us establish the very best long-term method we can devise.

Le Dernier Cri

LIKE HIS PREDECESSOR, MR. Pearson, Prime Minister Trudeau has had occasion to tick off General de Gaulle for unacceptable interference in the affairs of Canada. An agent, a member of the French leader's staff, has been sent, in Mr. Trudeau's phrase, to "agitate" among French-speaking residents of Manitoba—an "underhand and surreptitious" project which was inaugurated without any consultation with the Canadian government.

Again to quote Mr. Trudeau's strong comment, this was a "distasteful" action. It was perhaps also a trivial one, as international events go. But the fact remains that such an undertaking is inexcusable from a diplomatic standpoint. A country just does not do this to a friend and ally, and General de Gaulle has demonstrated a complete disregard for Canadian integrity and Canadian public opinion. The earlier incidents involving "Quebec libre," which earned the aging French leader a politely veiled invitation to go home and leave Canada to the Canadians, has apparently failed to penetrate his Olympian detachment.

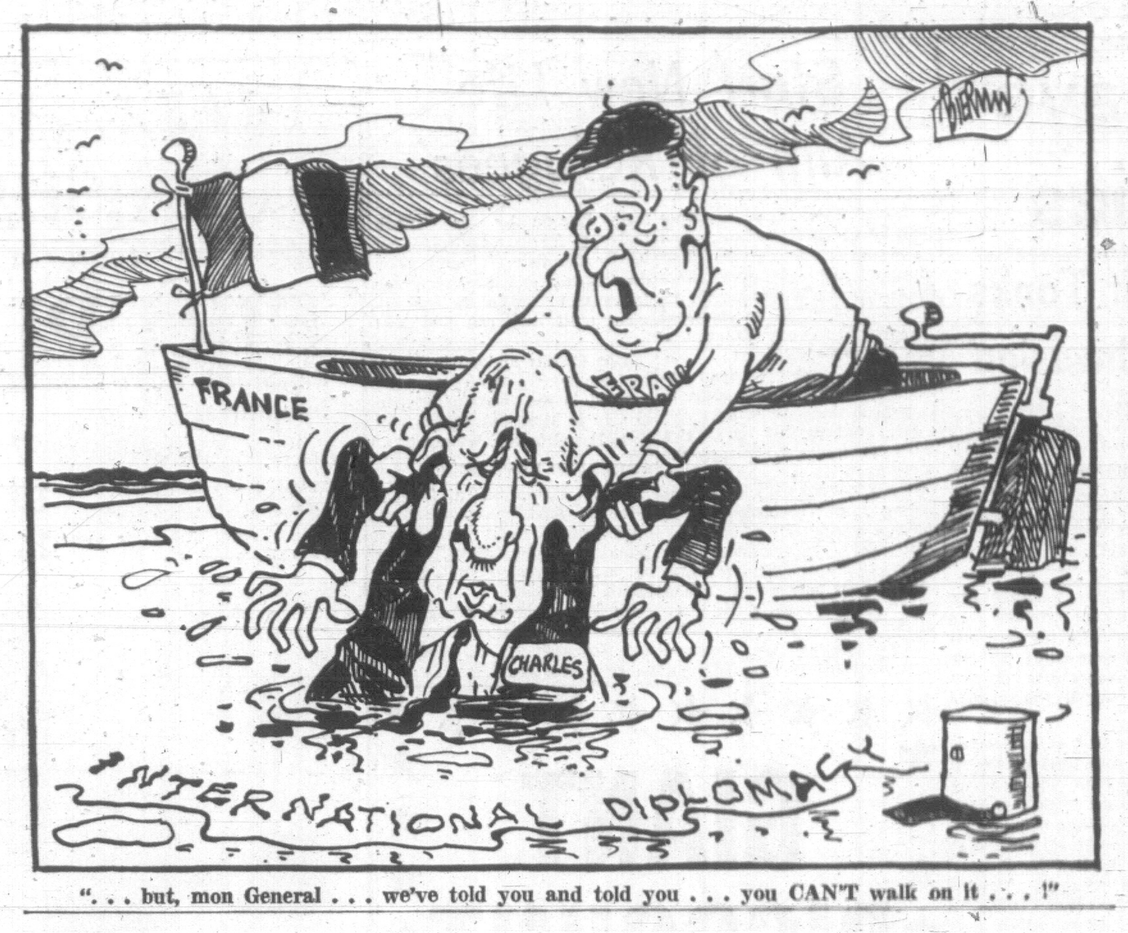
He appears unable to see that the French-speaking people of this country are Canadians, and that insults to Canada are to be regarded as insults to them. General de Gaulle is demeaning himself and his great historic record with such behavior in his old age. He deserves better than the treatment he is giving himself.

Free Talk

HEALTH MINISTER R. A. DONahoe of Nova Scotia announces proudly that his province will be the first in Canada to introduce a "free" medical insurance plan. Whom is he kidding? Not the people of Nova Scotia, surely, who will have to foot the bill. His province may have come up with the best provincial plan so far — that remains to be seen—but whatever it is, it cannot be described as "free."

At the same press conference Mr. Donahoe indicated the government will be raising the present five per cent provincial sales tax to seven or eight per cent to finance the scheme. That hardly sounds like a gift to the people.

The best method of financing government health insurance is debatable but one thing is certain: the public ultimately pays. And it is advantageous to have the public know that it does so. It is interesting to note in this regard that in the Soviet Union a proposal is under consideration to impose user fees as a means of curbing abuse of the national health plan.



". . . but, mon General . . . we've told you and told you . . . you CAN'T walk on it . . . !"

GUARDS VERSUS GUARDS

By JOSEPH ALSOP

A Turning-Point Seen in Red China

IN the vast, convulsive, mysterious and recurrently lunatic drama that has been going on in China since September, 1965 the decisive turning point may have been reached at last. Indeed, the change of dynasty that the wiser China-watchers have long waited for may now be taking embryo-shape behind the scenes in Peking. As one looks back on the titanic events that began to unfold when Mao Tse-tung was brutally confronted with an opposing majority in the Central Committee in September, 1965, a pulsating rhythm is clearly discernible. Periods of irrationality, violence and widespread civil conflict have continuously alternated with periods marked by desperate efforts to limit damage and to restore order.

Alsop

Sinister Secretary

There have been perfectly good reasons for these wild pulsations, moreover. Briefly, the clique around the aging Mao, headed by his termagant wife, Chiang Ching, and his sinister secretary, Chen Po-Ta, saw themselves with no future when they found that Mao no longer really controlled the Chinese Communist governing apparatus.

Thus, these people spurred Mao to launch the Cultural Revolution, to call out the Red Guards and to do many other madly disruptive things. And their aim was not merely to recapture control of the government for Mao, but also, and above all, to insure their own future control after Mao's state funeral. There, really, has been the essence of the whole drama.

For however frightful the disorder, however dire the damage, this little clique of persons who manipulate the divine but aging chairman could never permit the damage-limiting periods to last. They could not permit it until they had knocked out all their potential opopnents and they never managed to do so.

Thus, the manipulation of ailing old Mao continued, until each damage-limiting period was terminated with a new call to extreme action by the Red Guard groups and other elements who were responsive to Chiang Ching and Chen Po-ta. Now, however, China appears to have entered a new kind of damage-limiting period, for the quite simple reason that Chiang Ching and Co. are losing their only troops.

The whole scene is insanely confusing for several reasons. To begin with, there are anti-Mao Red Guards — great numbers of them indeed — who have always bellowed pro-Mao slogans while engaging in sanguinary battles with the truly Maoist groups. To go on with, the Peking press constantly hails the establishment of new "revolutionary committees", in province after province, which on inspection turn out to be packed with anti-Maoists.

This has been emphatically the case with all the recently announced "revolutionary committees" except perhaps for that formed in Tibet. Enough time has elapsed, furthermore, to permit the China-watchers to distinguish between the different Red Guard groups; and it is also clear that those groups truly responsive to Chiang Ching and Co. are now, quite literally, in the process of being liquidated.

In Southeast China, for instance, the two main groupings are called East Wind and Red Flag. The East Wind group's component factions are recruited from the more highly paid workers, other relatively privileged persons and the always conservative farmers. The Red Flag's factions comprise ideologically sincere Maoist students, plus all sorts of have-nots. Both have violently co-existed for two years.

More significant still are the reports that comparable groups of Red Guards are being sent to the salt or coal mines or condemned to other kinds of forced labor or being exiled to the remote frontiers, in province after province all over China. With their troops thus being harshly punished as well as disbanded, it is difficultt to see how Chiang Ching and Co. can organize another nationwide plunge into chaos. And if they cannot, the pulsations are at an end.

Power Balance Changed

If this is really the present state of affairs, it implies a fairly drastic change in the balance of power at the centre, in Peking. Unless the change is truly decisive — unless Chiang Ching and Co. have been effectively rendered impotent — there is always a strong possibility of further trouble.

Thus, the October 1 celebrations, when the current line-up will be revealed, are being eagerly awaited. Equally, one must wait to see what course is adopted by the predominantly military regime that now exists in China. But if the red-hot Cultural Revolutionaries have really been defeated, an eventual reaction will be natural toward rather extreme pragmatism. And this is what the China-watchers mean by a "change of dynasties."

FROM WASHINGTON

By CHARLES BARTLETT

A Disturbed Congress Nears Its End

OF the barometers available at the outset of the presidential campaign, the most striking is the contrast between the compact confident outlook of the Republicans and the ragged apprehensions of the Democrats. Nothing denotes the sag in Democrat morale so much as the autumn scene in Congress where members of the majority party seem inclined to behave like Mexican hat dancers without a hat or barn dancers without a fiddle.

Bartlett

Esprit is the missing element and its absence has been quickly marked by the gloomy forcast of Senate Leader Mike Mansfield on the prospects for Abe Fortas' nomination to be Chief Justice and the ratification of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

These are issues which the Democratic party, in a normal state of mind, would be eager to take to the country. Fortas is a distinguished lawyer attuned to the progressive attitudes which afford the party its political thrust. His opposition represents a reaction to these attitudes, a dissent made so delicate by the fact that Fortas is a Jew that the Republican presidential candidate has so far opted to have no part of it.

The NPT treaty is such a clear advance in world relations that normally it would be seized upon as a rallying point by the Democrats and not treated as a fragile butt of controversy. Instead of cowering before the reaction to the Soviet aggression, the Democrats have a chance to display their doggedness in the pursuit of peace.

One key to the numbness is a determination by Democrats who face hot challenges for their seats that nothing will happen in Washington in the next 60 days that can shore up their election prospects. A breakthrough in the Paris negotiations would be one thing but the normal roll of social legislation does not at this moment promise to meet the problems at home.

They are first impressed by the mood they find there, the baffling mix of frustrations, aggravations, and diffidence. "It scares me," reports one Democrat from an industrial district. "Everyone is so quiet and nobody's talking politics. People are strangely casual when they ask if I'm running for re-election."

Survived Severe Test

The House Democrats are survivors of a severe test in 1966 and they face their campaigns with a poise born of this experience. The primaries have been kind to incumbents, even those close to the administration. Few are optimistic that Hubert Humphrey will be a buoyant force on their tickets but a few count him a millstone. Some plan to run as if he didn't exist.

But the anxieties of the voters are baffling to the politicians because they do not respond to Washington solutions. Saying "you've never had it better" does not meet the concerns with the young, the wariness of the Negroes, or the dismaying sense of a moral decline.

The Democrats would feel more secure in a two-party election but George Wallace is a disturbing factor. The heavy turn to him in border states like Oklahoma has put Democratic incumbents such as Sen. Mike Monroney in grave trouble and the tide of Wallace sentiment is plainly moving north.

So insecure Democrats hasten home, undeterred by their chance to vote on legislation to control firearms and LSD, to enlarge the supply of nurses and doctors, and to fill out President Johnson's response to the needs of his time. To them it is a matter of "sauve qui peut."

The contrasting cool of the Republicans is reflected in the determination of one bloc of GOP members to force the session to continue until bills to reform Congress and the election laws have been enacted. This is the kind of imaginative initiative that was once left to the Democrats. It is a warning that the Democrats have lost their monopoly on political poise.

"WOULD YOU STAND UP, DAD? THEY WANNA KNOW WHO CALLED 'EM 'BUMS'!"

Looking Back

From the Times, Sept. 12, 1908.

A suggestion has been made that the parks board might use some chemical composition for the killing of weeds on the streets instead of hoeing them up and thus providing a seed-bed for all the stray weed seeds that come along on the next autumn wind. In England a chemical weed killer is used to a large extent.

The Victoria Chemical Works here does not prepare anything for the purpose, although they are seriously considering placing a chemical on the market,

Bilingual Both Ways

The Globe and Mail

IT WOULD be unfair to pretend that French Canadians' fears of Montreal's gradual Anglicization are groundless fantasies. The pressure of convenience in business, the looming ubiquity of Anglo-Saxon mass culture, and the overwhelming preference of immigrants for English could in a few decades mark the end of Montreal as a basically French city.

Most Canadians would deplore such an evolution. Both Quebec and Canada need Montreal as a uniquely attractive focus for French vitality and personality. Yet one can ask whether Montreal's character, or indeed that of all Quebec, can be salvaged by measures of cultural protectionism, not to say anti-English discrimination.

For that is what one must take to be the platform of the Mouvement pour l'Integration Scolaire. For several months, the MIS has been concentrating its efforts on the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard, a community whose population is split into about 50 per cent French origin, 47 per cent Italian origin, and 3 per cent English origin. The MIS wants to stop Italian immigrants from becoming "English Canadian" by forcing them to send their children to schools where French would be the only language of instruction.

Elections to the St. Leonard Catholic School Board in June put in power a majority of French-language nationalists sharing the MIS viewpoint. Eighteen days later they decreed that as of September 1 all St. Leonard Catholic children in Grade 1 would attend French-only classes. Bilingual classes would be gradually abolished, although English would be taught for one hour a day from Grade 5 up.

After the board requisitioned the only English high school in St. Leonard for use as an elementary school, English and Italian parents appealed to Le Royer Regional School Commission, which has jurisdiction over four suburbs, including St. Leonard. The commission decided to set aside Aime Renaud School for English instruction.

Late at night a group of French-speaking high school students took over the school and barricaded it, announcing that they had enough food to hold out past the scheduled school-opening on Wednesday. Adult pickets marched outside to support them. The opening of the school was postponed.

No doubt the demonstrators, among whom separatists are playing a large part, are delighted with the attention their action has drawn. Yet in purging surface frustrations they do little in the long run to remedy their legitimate grievances. Force cannot impress upon a people that a culture or language is superior.

There is one and only one way French Canadians in Quebec can induce immigrants, or even less open-minded English Canadians, to "adopt the language of the majority." That is by the confident affirmation everywhere of their language's excellence and usefulness. Already the linguistic renaissance of Quebec in some ways leaves English Canadians in their use of English far behind. Among even simple people in Quebec there is a deepening pride of language other Canadians could profitably imitate with their native tongues.

Yet a few Quebeckers, usually not those who truly cherish their language most, find it more satisfying to shackle those who, for good or bad reasons, think English will help their children more than French. Such negativism is not pride of language. It reflects a secret, even shameful fear that one's language cannot compete on its own merits.

Any intelligent, realistic person wishing to live in Quebec ought to see by now that his children will need a first-class education in French to make a full contribution to their province. For those who cannot appreciate this, the best persuasion is not repression but example. Government, management and unions must take co-ordinated, civilized measures to make French an indispensable tool of work. "L'Intendance suit" — the quartermasters follow the army, say the generals. So will the English schools, freely and lucidly, follow an army of French Canadians really determined to entrench their language in every sphere of their activity — especially business, labor, technology and science.

English Canada outside Quebec is not well placed by its history to offer lessons in bilingual tolerance. Yet it can offer a courage and a new faith. Even now, province after province is showing its will to make French, where reasonably practical, a living, recognized language. In the face of such a long, unhoped-for change of heart, the extremists of St. Leonard are turning back the clock on Quebec's own fine record of respecting the majority's language by respecting that of the minority.

Your Courteous People

I have been visiting Victoria with my brother-in-law and sister-in-law and before we leave I wish to let you know that we enjoyed our visit here very much.

I especially wish to say I have never met more courteous people anywhere. It makes no difference where I am — in the shops, at the motel, walking along the streets — everyone is so kind and considerate. If the people in the United States patterned themselves after your people it would help make our world a better place in which to live.

Many thanks to all for a nice visit in Victoria. I will fever forget it. — Mildred M. Bauman, Route 2, Excelsior, Minnesota.

Russian Invasion 'Last Dying Kick'

By PAUL JOHNSON
The New Statesman

The notion that the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia marks a return to the darkest days of the cold war and the rebirth of Stalinism seems to be misconceived. I would say the opposite: this squalid episode is the last dying kick of Soviet imperialism.

The parallel with Eden's Suez adventure seems apt.

No one seriously supposed, when our troops landed at Port Said, that Britain intended to restore the Empire. On the contrary, it became rapidly apparent that the operation was a ludicrous anachronism, and the half-hearted way in which it was pressed forward showed that even its authors had no real faith in it.

Eden's war marked the beginning of the end of our East of Suez role; and it was soon followed by the formation of a new government under a man who had radically different ideas about how Britain should comport herself in world politics.

The Soviet gambit shows all the hallmarks of the Suez venture, and demonstrates, to my mind, not strengh of purpose, but the lack of it.

Total Confusion

Divided councils at the summit, indecision, abrupt changes of policy, total confusion between political and military aims, faulty intelligence at all levels, absence of contingency planning and sheer incompetence — how familiar it all seems!

It is not yet clear how the Russian leaders will get themselves out of the mess they have created, but if a government under any other system had perpetrated such an abortion, heads would certainly have rolled.

And they may yet roll in Moscow. In some ways a Soviet government is just as vulnerable to criticism of foreign policy blunders as any other — though nemesis may be slow.

Nikita Khrushchev never really recovered his prestige after the Cuban missile crisis, and it was one of the chief counts against him when he was ousted from the leadership.

I have felt for some time that the Kosygin-Brezhnev-Podgorny troika was under fire from the comrades, especially for its handling of the Middle East.

Lost Equipment

The June 1967 war was a political, and in some respects a military, defeat for the Russians. By egging on the Egyptians (or appearing to) and then deserting them when the climax came, they lost a vast quantity of expensive equipment, which not only had to be replaced but was made to seem humilitatingly inferior to Western hardware used by the Israelis.

This was a bitter pill for the Soviet brasshats to swallow and of course they blamed the politicians. My guess is that recrimination over the Middle East has persisted and played some part in pushing a mainly dovish leadership into a hawl-like attitude towards the Chechs.

But Kosygin and Co., like Eden, are incapable by temperament of carrying through a hawkish policy with the ruthlessness and self-confidence it requires. They are willing to wound but afraid to strike decisively.

There were no half-measures, and no arriere-pensees, about the Soviet occupation of Hungary in 1956. Today, in Moscow, I detect all the symptoms of the faltering Eden touch.

The Soviet commanders in charge of the occupation are apparently subject to all kinds of inhibitions about the use of firepower (Eden, you remember, allowed the RAF to drop bombs on the Egyptians, but only small ones). I am willing to bet that they are now cursing the politicians for landing them in an intolerable situation.

Indeed, signs of muddle are already manifest. The Moscow politicians clearly told the brasshats that they would have a puppet government in being less than 24 hours after the Soviet forces crossed their start-lines; it would not only assure civil administration but supply their tropps.

The brasshats planned on this assumption. But nothing of the sort happened. Not only could no puppet government be formed but the Kremlin began to negotiate with the men the Soviet forces were supposed to crush.

The invaded population, far from welcoming the troops, proved unanimously hostile and the civil authorities wholly unco-operative. Food, water and petrol supplies to the troops quickly broke down in many cases.

Sullen, Hungry

Meanwhile, the Soviet commanders are still in doubt whether they are supposed to be holding down or "protecting" the Czechs, and their men, who now know they have been lied to, are disillusioned, sullen, hungry, bewildered and, in places, mutinous.

This is the kind of mess which drives senior military men to think of coups.

Of course Soviet commanders are subjected to a degree of political indoctrination and control which makes any move against the politicians highly unlikely. But they can certainly throw their weight behind the troika's critics on the Soviet presidium, and this could prove decisive.

The engaging Mr. Dubcek, I predict, will live to "bury" his enemies in Moscow.

RICKOVER

Without Psychiatrist Who's Got Problems?

By JERRY KLUTTZ

WASHINGTON — Plain-spoken and crusty, Vice-Admiral Hyman G. Rickover related to the Senate foreign affairs committee recently his experience with civil service personnel investigators during the Second World War.

He and his staff were pretty busy trying to build nuclear submarines and to get ships ready for battles. CSC, he recalled, would send in an investigator to ask lots of the same questions about each new employee. He soon got "fed up" with them, and so he had made up a mimeographed question-and-answer sheet as follows:

Q. Is this employee loyal?

A. I wouldn't have hired him if I didn't believe he was loyal.

Q. How does he do his job?

A. If he didn't do his job well I would fire him.

Q. What are his out-of-work habits?

A. I don't know and I don't care what he does after working hours. I'm only concerned with what he does during working hours.

Q. What do you know about his moral behavior?

A. I'm too busy with my own work to have time to discuss his personal affairs with him. If I find his outside activities interfere with his work I will take appropriate action.

But the admiral's streamlined responses had an unexpected reaction. Let's have him tell the story:

"Well, the next time one of these CSC agents came, my secretary typed the name of the employee in the proper place and gave him this sheet, and he was so taken aback that he accepted it and said nothing. Several more of these agents came and were given the mimeographed forms.

"I was beginning to congratulate myself on having solved the problem so simply and saving so much time when lo and behold about a month later the axe fell on me. They had gone back to CSC and complained I wasn't treating their questions seriously. They had me up for investigation and I had some difficulty."

The admiral also thinks the government today has too many sociologists, psychiatrists and psychologists to tell people they have troubles they don't realize they have. He said:

"I anticipate with horror the day when the navy is induced to place psychiatrists on board nuclear submarines. We are doing very well without them because the men don't know they have problems. But once a psychiatrist is assigned on board, they will learn that they have lots of problems."

Rickover said the navy did make a study to "determine the psychological differences between submarine sailors who had been tattooed once, sailors who had been tattooed more than once, sailors who had never been tattooed but wished they had, and sailors who hadn't been tattooed and didn't want to be."

He said the psychologists found this to be a "very complex subject" that would require more study. In other words, he commented acidly, "they wanted more money."

Tories: A Party in Search Of a Political Ideology

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — Is the Progressive Conservative Party shifting back to traditional Tory terrain at the right end of the political spectrum?

This question troubles some Conservatives who detect within the party what they feel is resistance to new ideas, approaches and policies.

Ever since John Diefenbaker rose to power the party has been torn between the prairie radicalism that spawned him and the true eastern conservatism that historically dominated the party.

This conflict was apparent throughout the general election campaign. The Conservatives tried to run a policy-oriented campaign and, with the notable exception of medicare, found themselves more often than not to the left of the Liberals.

Tory leader Robert Stanfield came out with a cautious, murky proposal for a guaranteed annual income for all Canadians — customarily the preserve of the Socialists. The Conservatives also advocated subsidies for wheat and tax subsidies for home owners stuck with high-interest mortgages.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the other Liberals, by contrast, conducted the campaign out of the right side of their mouths, urging such good old Tory standbys as fiscal integrity, a balanced budget and no more social welfare programs until the economy expanded enough to afford them. Trudeau consistently refused to get trapped in election promises that he felt would require tax increases.

THOMPSON

The Conservative Party was changed significantly by the election — and the change goes beyond the loss of 25 seats. Its power base shifted from prairie Canada to the Atlantic provinces as the prairies gave part of their heart to the Liberals and New Democrats and the Atlantic region rallied to Stanfield the native son.

Prairie radicalism has its roots in Saskatchewan, but redistribution and the voters combined to take 12 seats from the Tories there; now they hold only five constituencies.

They won 151,285 votes in the province, 41,994 fewer than in 1965 and 73,362 fewer than in 1963. Their share of the popular vote dropped to 36.9 per cent (it was 53.7 per cent in 1963), one percentage point ahead of the second-place New Democrats.

Significantly, however, the Conservatives boosted their strength in Alberta, the only province outside the Atlantic area where they captured more than half the popular vote. Their 50.3 per cent was good for 15 of Alberta's 19 seats.

Alberta is the fiefdom of Premier Ernest Manning who advocates political realignment to create a strong right-wing party.

The marriage of Social Credit and Conservatism worked only in Alberta and former national Socred leader Robert Thompson, now Conservative MP for Red Deer, is bound to have a strong influence in the Tory caucus. Thompson and other like-minded Tory MPs from Alberta could swing the party back to a right-wing course.

It may be some time before the direction of the party becomes apparent as it evolves from positions taken on individual issues that arise inside and outside Parliament.

Will Conservative MPs vote for the legalization of private homosexual acts between consenting adults, for broader grounds for abortion, for legislation intended to reduce drug prices and for other "progressive" social measures?

Will they be Conservatives or Progressives?

The Tories are groping for a political ideology. They are no longer the party of John Diefenbaker, but they have not yet returned to being the party of Meighen, Bennett and Drew.

The choice may be crucial. If Canada has entered a new political era, there would be little room for a party that insists on turning back the pages of history.

It's Pierre, Pierre In the Book Trade

By WILLIAM FRENCH
The Globe and Mail

Canadian books being published this fall break down easily into two categories those about Pierre Trudeau, and all the others.

No doubt about it, the Prime Minister will be dominating the publishing scene from now till Christmas. Here's the line-up at the moment:

● This Is Trudeau, by John Harbron, who has known Trudeau for some time, according to Longmans, his publisher. This one seems to have a clear lead on its competitors and should be out before the end of September. It's straight popular biography.

● The World of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, by Patrick Watson, who has known Trudeau for a long time, according to his publisher, McGraw-Hill. Another straight biography, it will be ready in October. Watson has reportedly been accorded several private interviews.

● The Making of the Prime Minister, by Martin Sullivan, of Time magazine's Montreal bureau, who got to know Trudeau very well recently, according to his publisher, Doubleday. This was the book Blair Fraser had just started when he drowned. It's a detailed account of the past year in Trudeau's life, in the style popularized by Theodore White in the 1960 presidential campaign. Due date is November 15.

● Journey to Power, by Noel Moore and Don Peacock, at least one of whom has known Trudeau quite well for some time, according to the publisher, Ryerson. This will be another documentary reconstruction of the past year, possibly ready in October.

In addition, Peter Newman's The Distemper of Our Times will be published on November 2. A study of the Pearson years, it will be twice as long as Newman's Renegade in Power. The last 20,000 words or so will deal with the rise of Trudeau.

And if that isn't enough, Trudeau himself will be represented as author in Two Innocents in Red China, coming from Oxford University Press. This is a translation of the book written by Trudeau and Jacques Hebert and published in Quebec seven years ago after their trip to China. Trudeau will check the translation (done by Ivon Owen, president of Oxford in Canada), but apparently doesn't plan to alter the original text.

All in all, it's not a bad start on a five-foot shelf.

That 'Litter' on the Beach Holds Treasures From Sea

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Carl

The broad crescent of sand which stretched in a pleasing curve between two rocky headlands was strewn with an intriguing assortment of debris in a pattern which at first sight seemed to be haphazard. A closer look, however, showed that the litter was of two kinds and in two strata; the upper was composed largely of logs, tossed high on the beach by past winter storms while between the jumbled mass of silvered forms and the water itself lay a scattering of smaller material left by the most recent tides.

Both types of flotsam hold interest for the beachcomber but attention is usually centred first on the freshly deposited debris because it holds more promise of newly-arrived "goodies."

Most of the material marking the level attained by the latest tide is seaweed that has been wrenched from its moorings and carried landward by the surf. The largest is kelp which form jumbled masses of the inter-twined stems in a "plumber's nightmare" of plastic pipes.

The swollen bulbs which form the plant's floats still retain tattered remnants of leafy fronds and the muti-fingered holdfast on the lower ends of the tapered stems still clutch bits of barnacle shell or portions of rock to which they were formerly attached.

A myriad of other plant forms are here too; palm weed that resembles so much the tropical tree from which it gets its name, ostrich plume, dead man's fingers, sea-lettuce, bladder wrack and bits of coralline algae.

●

The more fragile ones are somewhat battered by their trip through the surf and disintegration is further hastened by the hordes of sand-hoppers that attack them the moment they become stranded on the sand.

More durable are the shells of various sea creatures which live beneath the sand or fastened to the rocks at either end of the bay. But even these show the erosion work of water and sand for few have their original lustre and normally sharp edges are neatly rounded.

Still, they are readily recognized; the shell of the razor clam, the newest arrivals still showing the "varnished look" because of the shiny periostacum covering the outer surface, the heavy white valve of the butter clam, the almost plate-sized shell of the horse clam, the scoop-shaped bluish covering of the California mussel, and the chinese caps that formerly housed snail-like limpets.

Each castaway is the centre piece of a design formed in the sand by the gentle backwash of receding waves and each pattern differs from its neighbor in the detail of the lines which flow from it down the slope of the beach.

A bit of a search along the tide line also turns up remnants representing most other groups of marine animals: feathery plumes of bryozoans and hydroids; a stranded jellyfish with the radial canals still showing through the translucent disc; a slimy mass permeated with twisting tubes, the former home of a worm colony; the cast shell of a crab complete with all its mouth parts and jointed legs, a mermaid's purse, the egg case of a skate possibly still enclosing a developing embryo; the partial skelton of a fish, bird or sea mammal held together by strands of sinew and bits of tough skin.

●

Each find has its special interest. Some spark speculation as to identification especially when key parts are missing or they raise questions as to source. The more exotic looking specimens conjure up mental pictures of biological treasures being carried to our shores from lands across the sea and these spur us to hurry on to the next cove in eager expectation.

Trudeau Plans Fewer Public Appearances

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Wednesday he wants to limit his public appearances, but left in doubt to what extent.

He told a news conference that a reported plan that he wanted to limit speaking engagements to 36 a year was not cleared through him.

In any case, he hoped to speak much less than 36 times in his first year as prime minister. He could not handle that many speaking engagements.

He did not wish to "remain in hiding," but he did wish his cabinet ministers and others to play a greater role in this respect.

Mr. Trudeau said he tried not to make the June election campaign a personality contest.

"And I don't want to make it a personality government," he added, drawing a small laugh from the roomful of reporters.

In any case 36 was too high a figure. He hoped that he could go to many places and not speak at all.

PRECEDENT SET

He noted that Mayor Drapeau of Montreal eliminated speaking engagements in his first year as mayor to devote his time to city business.

Mr. Trudeau said it was likewise important for him to devote as much time as possible to the business of the government of Canada, which was as important as Montreal.

The 36 figure was brought to light by Clemens Nieman, the Ontario Liberal party president, at a weekend Liberal meeting in Peterborough, Ont. Mr. Niemans said it was a tentative figure.

The plan was to have 12 party speaking appearances for the popular leader and 24 non-party functions.

Couple Killed

LILLOOET (CP)—An elderly coupl died Wednesday when fire destroyed their home near this community 110 miles northeast of Vancouver. Killed were Carl Franson, 84, and his wife, Julia, 80. Cause of the fire was under investigation.

PM Challenges Quebec Over Language Rights

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau challenged Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson Wednesday to make good his promises to protect English language rights.

Referring to the language conflict in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard, where the local school board is phasing out bilingual elementary schools in favor of an entirely French school system, Mr. Trudeau said it was "retrograde in every sense" to attempt to impose one of the two official languages.

Quebec Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal did not overrule the St. Leonard School board decision. Mr. Cardinal has endorsed the school board's basic philosophy, that children of immigrants should attend French schools.

Mr. Trudeau arrived at his press conference armed with quotations from statements made by Premier Johnson on English language rights in Quebec.

He recalled that the federal government had tried at the federal-provincial constitutional conference in February to have minority language rights written into the constitution.

Mr. Johnson argued against this as unnecessary, the prime minister said. He quoted the Quebec premier as saying that the English-speaking enjoyed enviable rights in Quebec and, in Mr. Johnson's words, "we fully expect it to remain thus in the future."

The prime minister said it was unfortunate that Mr. Johnson, convalescing in Bermuda at the time of the St. Leonard crisis, had not been present "to keep his ministers and his government in line."

Mr. Trudeau added that he was "looking forward to the day when he will take a firm hand and live up to these commitments."

He argued that the need for a constitutional guarantee of linguistic rights was now more evident than ever.

And he insisted that attempting to impose the language of the majority on the minority in Quebec was the worst possible way to strengthening the French language in Canada.

It was like going back "50 or 75 years" to the period in which the position of the French language had been cut down in Manitoba, Ontario and New Brunswick, he said.

Senate Changes Favored

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau promised Wednesday that reform of the Senate will be carried out through consultation with the provinces if possible but by some other means if necessary.

Giving assurance that he had "no thought" of abolishing the upper house, the prime minister said he favored restructure should reflect the realities of Canadian regionalism.

Reiterating his hope that consulation with the provinces would be the route to Senate reform, the prime minister said the issue was one for study by the constitutional conference.

A continuing constitutional conference of the prime minister and the provincial premiers was set up at a federal-provincial conference in Ottawa in February.

He said his government did not want any Senate appointments made before an overhaul of the Senate to "prejudge any reform."

Brothers Baffled By NDP Criticism

Education Minister Donald Brothers Wednesday said he did "not know what all the fuss is about" over his picture and message appearing in an encyclopaedia's sales pitch.

NDP spokesmen criticized him for allowing his position as a cabinet minister to be used as part of the advertising in a promotional brochure put out by the encyclopaedia.

"I never endorsed any particular book," he told The Times.

"I don't have any shares in this company. I don't know anyone connected with it and I don't know what the fuss is about."

Mr. Brothers said his message, as reprinted in the brochure, was a "completely innocuous" suggestion that British Columbians improve their education.

"All I was asked to do was write a letter urging people to try to get a higher education—to get the best education possible and surely that's my responsibility," he said.

RECITES OPPORTUNITIES

Mr. Brothers said his message only recited the opportunities for education provided through government help to universities, junior colleges, community colleges and technical institutes.

Mr. Brothers said if he was to be criticized for that on the grounds of commercializing his post then his critics should also demand that he return some driver-training material he accepted Tuesday from the B.C. Automobile Association as edcuation minister.

"Otherwise I'm illicitly advertising the B.C. Automobile people too according to these critics," he said.

Mr. Brothers' message and picture take up the entire sixth page of the brochure being mailed to households and given away at supermarkets where the encyclopaedia is on sale.

Under the heading "Learning is for everyone — a message from the minister of education," it says:

"Each year, each day, man's environment becomes more complex. The knowledge explosion, and the fact that some 90 per cent of all the scientists who ever lived are living now, account for the colossal forward strides that are being made in research, technology and understanding of the humanities.

"Fortunately, in British Columbia the education system has grown and adapted to meet these changing circumstances. In the early years of school, students not only amass information but are developed into thinking individuals and learn how to find for themselves the knowledge they need from the vast store available.

"In the senior secondary grades a number of optional programs have been provided so that students may choose the line of endeavor best suited to their particular abilities and talents—programs leading not only to university but to further training in industry, commerce and the arts.

"And with the knowledge that it is becoming increasingly more difficult to become a productive member of society without training beyond secondary schools, the department of education in British Columbia has provided a still-growing network of vocational schools, regional colleges and universities as well as an institute of technology.

"The philosophy that has motivated the department of education is also motivating the people of the province, young and old. Three-quarters of the pupils entering grade one now enter grade 12, as compared with the three-fifths in 1960, and this fraction is increasing each year.

"Book sales are higher than ever before, and the activity in lending libraries is greater. Each year 200,000 adults take advantage of night school opportunities to upgrade their skills or increase their knowledge.

"Learning is an unending process. I commend it to all who want to keep abreast of the exciting times in which we live."

ONE OF THE REASONS for closure of Mount Maxwell Park at Salt Spring Island was "man-sized" damage to rustic guard rail on steep roadway, shown here being viewed with disgust by Mrs. Ellen Bennett. Park entrance now has been blocked to traffic.

NO TALKS SCHEDULED AT TAHSIS

A union official said today no talks were scheduled with the company in a dispute which has shut down the Tahsis pulp mill at Gold River.

The mill's gates were closed Wednesday after a dispute over working overtime to repair a pump developed Tuesday afternoon. About 325 employees are involved.

The company is calling the work stoppage an illegal strike while the union says mill workers were locked out.

No talks between the parties have been held or are scheduled, Orville Braaten, president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, said in Vancouver today.

Car Insurance Report Ready In 3 Weeks

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black today said he expected the royal commission report on automobile insurance will be made public in about two or three weeks.

The three-man commission headed by Mr. Justice Wootton spent almost two years studying all phases of auto insurance and the present system of civil suits to determine liability in accidents before turning in its report to the government this summer.

Youth Burned In Noon Fire

A 19-year-old Victoria youth Dennis Tottenham, is reported to have received severe burns to the back in a noon-hour blaze in a frame house at 740 Kings Road, today.

Crews of three fire trucks managed to contain the blaze, centred in a back shed used for cooking.

Three youths lived in the house rented from Bali Kudra, 1364 Hillside.

The main section of the house was badly damaged by smoke and water and a number of windows were broken.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me the real name of authoress Pearl S. Buck? The public library says that is her real name but some time ago I saw a formal picture of all the Nobel Prize winners and it gave her real name and in brackets Pearl S. Buck.—A.S.

A. The confusion in this case may stem from one of Pearl S. Buck's two marriages. According to the international Who's Who, Pearl S. Buck is in fact her real name. She was born in Hilisboro, West Virginia, of American missionaries. During her life she has been married twice, once to an unnamed teacher at Nanking University, and in 1935 to one Richard J. Walsh (died 1960). The name given outside the brackets may have been one of the married names.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps on antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Island Parks Being Closed By Vandalism

By JOHN SLINGER

Vandalism, substantially checked by new provincial parks regulations, is still a major problem in private and municipally-operated parks on the Island.

At least two parks have been forced to close and picnic and recreation facilities have been removed from a third because of excessive damage.

But imposition of a $1 entrance fee and increased supervision at B.C. parks has "cut down a tremendous amount" on vandalism, Harold McWilliams, provincial parks branch director said today.

The problem arises every summer, but this summer has brought considerably fewer reports of wilful damage, he said.

The new fee system, begun in early June, was expected to raise $250,000 this summer. The money was to be used to provide extra maintenance and control in 50 of the 94 provincial roadside parks and campsites.

•

At Nanaimo, the Chamber of Commerce has given up maintaining the Mount Benson lookout and park, chamber president Vic Jones said.

Vandals have torn down lookout guardrails and knocked over cement-based picnic tables and washrooms every year since the park was opened four years ago, he said.

Earlier this summer, fires were started and the vandals were burning some of the debris they produced.

Maintenance became too expensive for the chamber, he said.

On Salt Spring Island, the road up to the 1,800-foot park and lookout on Mount Maxwell has been closed because vandals have bulled over concrete-based guardrails and, in some cases, pushed them over the cliff.

It leaves the lookout dangerous to sightseers.

At Comox, picnic tables and benches have been removed early from the waterfront Port Augusta park and village clerk Eileen Trimble said much of the equipment might not be salvageable.

•

Vandals have also badly damaged a footbridge over a creek in the park, she said.

Mr. McWilliams said most of the damage is attributable to teen-age parties on Friday and Saturday nights.

At Nanaimo, beer bottles were found strewn around Mt. Benson park after damage sessions, Mr. Jones said.

Miss Trimble said the Comox park "is a great place for young people to go down and park on a Saturday night."

In Victoria, parks superintendent Herb Warren said the problem this year is not appreciably different from other years.

He said vandanism has regular peak periods—in spring, when the weather begins to improve; just prior to school opening at the end of summer and before Halloween.

However, cautioned Harry Wipper, Nanaimo's parks superintendent, most young people co-operate with the authorities.

•

"It only takes one or two to make it look bad for everybody," he said. "I'd like to report that, generally, we're very pleased."

At Island RCMP headquarters, a spokesman said "no great upsurge of vandalism" has been reported this summer. He said "it is to be deplored, of course . . . but apparently there isn't a great deal of it."

Appeal Court Reduces Sentence For Beating Wife

A Ladysmith man previously sentenced to two years less a day for beating his wife, today had the sentence reduced to one year by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

Kenneth A. Butterfield, 31, appealed the sentence in Victoria Law Courts through his lawyer John Thorn. He also appealed a sentence of six months for assaulting Brian C. Delcourt, but this appeal was dismissed.

Another sentence of one year for threatening Delcourt with a broken bottle was reduced to six months. All present terms are to be served concurrently.

On the conviction for wife beating Mr. Thorn submitted that imprisonment was not the remedy since the accused required psychiatric help. He said the pre-sentence report indicated Butterfield was "a truculent individual who required psychiatric treatment."

In answer to a question by Chief Justic H. W. Davey, Mr. Thorn admitted psychiatric facilities are available in jail. He added that Butterfield had been in prison since June 8 this year.

$1 Million Apartment At Mt. Tolmie

An apartment project costing at least $1 million is planned for the western side of Mount Tolmie in Saanich.

It would consist of 94 suites — one, two and three-bedroom — and would be located at the northeast corner of Richmond Road and Mayfair Drive.

The rezoning application by Ken Oliver is expected to come before Saanich council Monday night when it will probably be forwarded to a public hearing later this month or in October.

The development would be in two buildings. The zoning being sought is for medium-density apartments where height is restricted to three storeys.

Mr. Oliver said today the site covers 6½ acres and the development would cost "at least" $1 million.

No children would be allowed in what was described as a "better-class apartment."

REZONING ASKED

In another major project, a $4,000,000 townhouse development for Gordon Head reported in the Times Tuesday, Saanich has received application for rezoning.

Exact location of the project has not been disclosed by the developer. Diversified Holdings Limited of Edmonton, but it is expected to be near the University of Victoria.

The developer has said the accommodation will be "far above average" with each unit comparing with a $20,000 house. Children will be allowed.

The initial stage, costing $2 million, will provide 120 units of accommodation in groups of four under one roof. Site area covers 16 acres.

Saanich planner Tom Loney said municipal officials met the developer's architect Tuesday afternoon. Further details will be submitted and at that time the application will be considered and forwarded to the Advisory Planning Commission and to council.

The need for various types of apartment development were discussed in the 55-page Plan for the University Area prepared by Mr. Loney in 1965.

He said the university area will continue to attact young families and because of its attractiveness, well-established mature and retired persons and families, as well as many attached to the university.

Bridge to Mainland 'Worth the Cost'

The bill for a Vancouver Island-mainland bridge or tunnel link would be about $200 million, NDP Leader Robert Strachan suggested Wednesday.

He said it would be worth the cost in improving the economy of the island by removing a transportation tariff holding back development.

Mr. Strachan, supporting the byelection campaign call of federal leader T. C. Douglas — who will seek the Nanaimo-Cowichan-the Islands seat — said the federal proposal to spend a similiar amount for smaller Prince Edward Island and the $600 million English Channel tunnel project show such massive land links are possible and worthwhile.

He said the party at this point primarily is stressing the need for a feasibility study of the idea put forward by Mr. Douglas.

Mr. Strachan said besides eliminating a "tariff wall against the movement of goods, a bridge connection would enable Vancouver Islanders to go to ballet, opera, theatre and sports events on the mainland more conveniently.

He said a bridge would at long last fulfill one of the terms under which B.C. joined Confederation in 1871. The promise to build a railway bridge to the island never got beyond an 1873 order-in-council by Sir John A. Macdonald's cabinet designating Victoria as the Pacific terminus of the transcontinental railway.

Shoal Harbor Control Aim of Ratepayers

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A campaign to prevent pollution of Tsehum harbor on the northern end of the Saanich Peninsula, has been launched by a ratepayers' association.

The eastern district, North Saanich Property Owners' Association, has requested government action to control the disposal of waste in the beautiful inlet, otherwise known as Shoal Harbor.

It urged strict controls and foreshore zoning regulations for marinas.

Control of the harbor should be under the jurisdiction of one body, it suggested.

The inlet's waterfront is shared by North Saanich and Sidney.

"It is obvious that a single body of water can not be divided by a line having Sidney regulations on one side of it and North Saanich regulations on the other," it pointed out in its brief.

The association also urged the government to reject the application of Albert Yuen for a foreshore lease to allow another marina in the basin.

MAKE TESTS

Pending a reply from the government, the group appointed Dr. William Newton, well known biologist, to make a coli test of the harbor's waters.

Major David A. Petrie, secretary, said the association was not opposed to marinas.

"It is one of the most suitable harbors on southern Vancouver Island for small boats," he said. "Our concern is the abuse of the inlet's waters.

"It is also obvious that there is a saturation point in the number of marinas that should be permitted in any one body of water," he added. "Where is it going to end if there are no controls?"

Tsehum harbor with a shoreline of about four miles, has become in the past few years, one of the largest anchorages for small boats on southern Vancouver Island.

It is a body of water with no fresh water streams flowing into it during the summer season, and depends on tidal action to flush out waste from hundreds of small craft.

Its northern and northwest beaches are mud flats. These are causing some concern to residents as there are indications that the mud is accumulating sewage.

The inlet has also several branches, each of which contribute to the pollution problem on the whole, according to the association.

A northern branch contains the Royal Victoria Yacht Club mooring facilities; a marina and yacht mooring station formerly known as Clark Brothers; and Westport Marina and Mooring station, formerly known as Randle's Landing.

Blue Heron basin, another branch, is occupied by the Capital City Yacht Club.

Shoal Harbor (the southwestern branch) within the boundaries of Sidney, contains two marinas, the Fisherman's wharf, and numerous mooring floats and anchorages. Resthaven Hospital is situated in this area.

White Paper, Baird Hold Different Views

Ald. Robert Baird said today that the outfall method of disposing of raw sewage has been outlawed in Britain.

He made the statement following an extended tour of England and Scotland.

Ald. Baird's statement is in conflict with a British Medical Research Council White Paper which, as recently as three weeks ago, re-stated its findings that outfalls were safe and did not consititute a health hazard if taken far enough and deep enough into the sea.

But Ald. Baird said that "being careful to choose those cities comparable in size and environment to Greater Victoria" he found engineers virtually unanimous in their condemnation of the raw sewage outfall method of disposal.

He said the cities where most useful facts were gathered were London, Coventry, Perth, Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen.

Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen are costal communities. Perth is situated on the Firth of Tay, 20 miles from the coast. Coventry is nine miles from the geographic centre of England. London is situated on the River Thames.

LOOK TO FUTURE

Ald. Baird stated in a prepared press release that two facts "were forcibly presented to me by engineers: raw sewage, after communition is still raw sewage no matter how far out to sea it is carried. The outfall method generally speaking is now outlawed in most of Great Britain and some communities have been given until 1971 by order of the purification boards, to clean up the problem.

"Two, the long view point of sewage disposal is to consider now the needs of future generations and plan accordingly."

Ald. Baird said it is obvious that Greater Victoria must fully investigate at least partial treatment before dumping sewage in the sea.

"Partial treatment allows only a harmless effluent to be deposited in the sea. Sludge is a product of a treatment plant and must be disposed of in some way. Sludge is usually composted or transported to a deep part of the ocean many miles away."

Ald. Baird adds that the cost of treatment must be considered and met "courageously if we desire an efficient and healthful system so necesssary to the community."

The British Medical Research Council published its White Paper, Memorandum 37, in 1960. In mid-August city engineer James Garnett wired the council to ascertain whether or not the findings, which gave deep sea outfalls a clean bill of health, were still valid eight yeart later.

The answer "findings still valid, repeat valid" was received two days later.

Council, Board To Co-Ordinate Site Development

Saanich council and Saanich Peninsula school trustees inaugurated a joint committee Wednesday which will co-ordinate development of future school sites and surrounding lands.

Under terms of reference approved at the first meeting, three representatives from each body together with administrators will meet twice yearly to forestall clashes in council and school board development policies.

Because the committee will be dealing with land acquisitions meetings will be closed.

Saanich council already has a similar committee maintaining liaison with the Greater Victoria school board. Both school districts encompass parts of Saanich.

Child, 4, Rolls Into Wasp's Nest

A four-year-old child was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital early today after he rolled into a wasp's nest near his Colwood home.

Raymond McLellan, of 1061 Haslam, was treated and later discharged. Hospital officials said the boy was not badly hurt in the incident.

Salt Spring Chamber Backs Sewer Protest

Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce voted Wednesday night at Ganges to oppose any dumping of raw or partially treated sewage into the sea or any other public body of water.

The executive representing 119 members, voted overwhelmingly in favor of the resolution.

Chamber president Gavin Reynolds said a stand must be taken on the issue now.

"We are under pressure to do so since all the other Gulf Island chambers have made public their decision to oppose the dumping of sewage in the sea."

There was only one abstention.

A public meeting has been called for 8 p.m. Saturday of the Salt Spring Island Anti-Pollution Society to discuss the pollution Control Board's decision to allow the Malivien Estate to dump partially treated sewage in Trincomali Channel.

It has been rumored that there are 20 other developments in the Gulf Island coming up for similar applications.

Totem Poles Confiscated But Charges Dismissed

Charges that three Americans, including a New York anthropologist, illegally removed totems from an historic Haida village on the Queen Charlotte Islands, were dismissed there Wednesday.

Charges were laid after RCMP confiscated a number of primitive Indian art pieces from a chartered boat in the Islands.

Charged were Adelaide Demenil and Dr. Edmond Snow Carpenter of New York City and Clinton Helvey of Connecticut, police said.

They were tried under Section 90 of the Indian Act for removal of totem poles and grave carvings from reserve lands.

Magistrate Jack Fraser of Sandspit said today he dismissed the charges on grounds of intent. He declined to explain his reasons, saying only "I listened to all the evidence given and on the basis of the evidence I felt it should be dismissed on those grounds."

GRAVE MARKERS

Included in goods confiscated by police were sawed fragments of a large totem pole and a number of grave markers. Indications are the carvings were taken from the abandoned village of Skedans some 25 miles southeast of Charlotte City.

Sources indicate that in the open market, the carvings in police custody could bring $10,000.

The Wednesday night trial lasted until nearly midnight.

Early testimony was presented by two hereditary chiefs of the Skedans village, one aged 78 and the other 83.

Police testimony was called and a voir-dire — a trial within a trial — was held to determine whether a statement from one of the accused was admissible evidence.

Immediately after the voir-dire, Magistrate Fraser questioned Dr. Carpenter.

The anthropologist said he intended to give the carvings to a museum to preserve them from decay. The magistrate dismissed the case.

The dismissal was granted before the final crown witness, provincial museum anthropologist Peter McNair was called to give testimony.

Crown counsel was Cunliffe Barnett of Prince Rupert. Appearing for the defence was Alan Macdonnell, also of Prince Rupert.

Dr. Carpenter's party left Sandspit by air this morning before they could be reached for comment.

The charge is an unusual one and it is believed the first time it has been tried in British Columbia.

Totems and grave markers are owned by the village bands and, under their hereditary system, are more or less personal property of the chiefs.

Magistrate Fraser ordered the goods to be turned over to the chief and council of Skidegate village, descendants of Skedans, to be disposed of. Either they will be returned to the Skedans site or sent to the National Museum in Ottawa.

Mr. McNair said this morning that plundering of reserve lands "has been going on for a long time."

He said a strong feeling is growing among provincial authorities and the Indians themselves that the artifacts "have to be protected."

BIG PRICES

A university anthropologist said in an interview the New York and London markets for primitive art have "skyrocketed in the last few years."

He said it was allied with the spiralling money-value of art and the growing appreciation of the primitive carved works of Canada's coastal Indians as "a very romantic and highly respected" form.

The accepted method for private and institutional collectors gathering the works is to make an agreement with the band that owns them.

The general feeling among museum officials is that the remaining works should be removed to museums where they can be adequately preserved and, in some cases refinished, rather than being "left to be crumbled to dust," he said.

Above all, he said, they should never be permitted to leave the province—not even to go to the Ottawa museum.

There is a movement among persons who are studying primitive cultures of the coastal Indians that the wisest move for the bands would be to establish their own museums.

'Secure' Means Watch Out for Snipers and Hidden Mines

Following is an appraisal of the situation in South Vietnam, written by an Associated Press correspondent who has spent much of the last three years reporting from every one of the war-ravaged country's provinces, in addition to visiting Laos, Thailand and Cambodia.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

SAIGON (AP) — Three years ago, on the eve of the American troop buildup in Vietnam, one could on a pleasant day drive 60 miles from Saigan through the lovely rubber plantation country to the seaside resort of Vung Tau.

Today, with 600,000 American troops committed to a war that is costing $2,000,000,000 a month, the road to Vung Tau is officially considered secure, at least until sundown—but almost every week someone is killed or kidnapped by Viet Cong guerrillas.

The rubber trees are mostly scarred and lifeless, the plantations abandoned long ago. What used to be a 1½-hour jaunt is now a three- to four-hour ordeal over mine-cratered pavement and muddy detours around bombed-out bridges.

Three years ago, when Vung Tau was safe for Sunday drivers, the Communists were threatening to cut the rest of the South Vietnam in half across the central highlands from the Laotian border on a line through Pleiku to Qui Nhon on the South China Sea.

U.S. special forces camps were falling to the Communists, province and district towns were falling; Kontum, Pleiku and Ban Me Thuot were all but given up.

HURL BACK THREAT

Massive American firepower, applied mostly by the helicopter-borne troops of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, hurled back the threat to the highlands. For a change, Communist forces were on the run, and optimism increased in the American camp.

That was two years ago.

In late January and early February of this year, the Communists' Tet (lunar new year) offensive fell with a fury on not only Kontum, Pleiku and Ban Me Thuot, the remote highland cities, but on more than 30 cities from the Mekong Delta north to the so-called demilitarized zone between the two Vietnams, and especially on Saigon.

Americans were dying at the rate of 200 to 300 a week, more than 800 planes had been shot down trying to stop Communist troops and supplies moving south from North Vietnam.

Despite constant denials from Hanoi, not many doubted that the main thrust of the Tet offensive came from North Vietnamese regulars.

The Tet offensive pushed the average of American troops killed to more than 500 a week, and set off a groundswell of pessimism in the United States that reverberated on the national political scene there.

The Communists paid dearly for their daring, preferring to settle for what they gained in world opinion to what they failed to achieve on the battlefield. Several cities were occupied by Communist-led forces for a time, but none fell.

"This is his last gasp, his death rattle," said top U.S. military men in endless variations, but three months later the Communists still had enough punch to mount a second wave against Saigon.

SEES THREE WARS

This time the major menace was Soviet-made rockets that came screaming over the South Vietnamese capital and fell with indiscriminate horror on both military and civilian.

Looking back over three years of war, an arm-chair strategist would find himself confronted with almost three different wars:

1965—The Phasing out, for all practical purposes, of the old American advisory effort of trying to instruct and encourage the dispirited Army of the Republic of South Vietnam, to fight back against a guerrilla army holed up in the jungles and mountains along the Cambodian and Laotian borders. The delta was written off as Viet Cong country.

1966-67—The American troop buildup results in an essentially American war, fought along conventional lines with search-and-destroy missions backed up by massive artillery and air power. The U.S. Navy fires its big guns offshore, the bombers raid North Vietnam night and day, pounding military targets of sometimes questionable value right up to the outskirts of Hanoi and Haiphong.

1968—The war comes to the cities of South Vietnam.

From a morale standpoint, the year when defeat was in the air gave way to the year when victory was thought to be in sight, and finally, with the opening of the U.S.-North Vietnam peace talks in Paris, the year of hopes for peace—except that in South Vietnam, as the talks dragged on and frustration increased on the American political scene, there were also fears of a U.S. pullout.

Saigon in that same time underwent a triple metamorphosis. From a pleasant French colonial city, it became a roaring, raucous American GI town, full of bar girls and night clubs.

Somewhere along the line, to soak up the flow of piasters and halt inflation, an American aid official encouraged the importation of motor bikes and scooters from Japan.

By this summer Saigon had easily become the noisiest city in the Orient, its streets throbbing and its handsome tamarand trees dying from exhaust fumes.

After Tet, a new seriousness of national purpose, as proclaimed by President Nguyen Van Thieu, gripped South Vietnam for a time and in fact lasted longer than many cynics expected.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Industrials Turn Lower

Interrupting a seven-day advance industrials turned lower on the Toronto stock market today. Brokers said the break in the rally was due to weakness in New York. However, other sections of the market were steady.

Resuming trading after a one-day holiday Wall Street issues churned irregularly at the start and then assumed a lower trend.

AT TORONTO—In industrials, A.G.F. Management fell 2 to 52, Leigh Instruments 1¾ to 37½, CPR 1½ to 63¼, Great West Saddlery 1⅛ to 15⅞ and Inco ⅝ to 39⅞. Great West Life gained 2¼ to 74¼, Bartaco 1⅝ to 16⅝ and Alexander Wood 1½ to 9.

Canadian Superior Oil was up 3 to 52, Worldwide Energy 75 cents to $8.00 and Canadian Gridoil ⅝ to 13½. Asamera dropped 30 cents to $8.40.

AT NEW YORK—Avco sprang to the top of the most-active list on a monster trade of 504,900 shares at 45½, off 2¼.

Global marine opened late on a block of 116,000 shares, down 14¾ at 40, trimming about 1½ from the loss in later dealings.

Among other active stocks, Avnet dropped about 3 and Olin Mathieson a point or more, while Atlantic Richfield advanced more than 2. M-G-M advanced about 3 points while Martin-Marietta, Chrysler, Illinois Central and General Motors rose more than a point.

AT MONTREAL — Industrials and utilities slid in moderately active trading today on the stock market. Banks and papers edged up.

Freiman fell 1⅛ to 10, Calgary Power ½ to 24 and Simpsons ¼ to 37⅝. Massey-Ferguson, Bell Canada and CPR lost ⅜ each to 16⅝, 46½ and 64⅜ respectively.

Famous Players climbed 2½ to 61½ and United Weston B 1¼ to 10½. Sherwin-Williams, Velcro and Bruck B added 1½ each to 22½, 50 and 14.

In senior mines and oils, Home A gained 1¼ to 25, Home B 2 to 28 and Hudson Bay Mining 1 to 60. Falconbridge dropped 1¾ to 93¼ and Denison 1 to 72.

AT LONDON, modest selling developed on the stock market today and prices eased slightly on end-account profit-taking and the Bank of England's repeated call for restraint.

Government funds firmed on better sterling sentiment.

In dollar stocks, Canadian issues firmed in line with Wednesday's market trend in Montreal and Toronto.

AT VANCOUVER, EDP fell $2.50 to $24 in pre-noon trading today.

Captain International was active in the industrials and gained .50 to $12.37 on 25,100 shares.

The mining section was again strong and active. Buttle was .06 better at $1.27 on 89,000 shares, Cons. Skeena rose .09 to $1.45 on 66,500 shares and Lytton Minerals put on .20 to $2.25.

Sunlite was .25 better at $6.45 in the oils and Stampede gained .15 to $3.20 but both Bata, at $1.65 and Trans-Canada Oils, at $1.90 were off .10.

New Information System N.Y. Plan

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Plans for a special communications network to facilitate trading in large blocks of stock were revealed Wednesday by Gustave L. Levy, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange board of governors.

Addressing a meeting of life insurance executives in Chicago, Levy said the system—which has a target date of late 1969—would "enable large-block traders, with the aid of their brokers, to exchange information on buying and selling interests, to learn where potentially available stock is held and to speed the execution of large-block orders on the exchange floor."

The information system—at the moment strictly a working tool—could prompt more active discussion of a two-tiered market for stocks—one market for institutional traders and one for the public—with the two tied together electronically.

Although there was no mention of such a set-up in Levy's speech, some Wall Street leaders feel that the rapid growth of institutional trading will eventually force such a system. The current method of handling odd-lot trades (orders for less than 100 shares), by which the small transactions are executed outside the normal auction market, has been cited as a good example of the system that might develop.

Institutional sources, according to Levy, currently account for about 50 per cent of NYSE trading, excluding transactions by members for their own accounts. The institutions' share of trading has been growing steadily for a number of years, prompting some fear that it may overpower individual trading.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Activity lessened toward the close today of trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, but the trend of declining prices continued.

Only the November and January rapeseed futures were not caught in the downward price trend.

Flax futures prices dropped sharply, up to five cents, on commission house selling attracting a scarcity of buyers.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IWA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged.

Fund Admits Getting Tip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The institutional investors charged by the staff of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission with having made improper use of "insider" information, acknowledged Wednesday it sold 6,000 shares of Douglas Aircraft Co. stock after obtaining a tip.

But it would be an "unauthorized and illegal exercise of power" by the SEC to interpret this as a violation of the securities laws or SEC regulations, the mutual fund said in a reply filed with the commission.

The SEC division of trading and markets has alleged that the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith tipped Madison Fund and 14 other big investors in 1966 that Douglas was about to announce a worsening of its earnings position.

Harvesting Conditions Improved

OTTAWA (CP) — Good weather this week has improved harvesting conditions on the Prairies, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

Swathing is in full swing throughout Alberta and Saskatchewan but combining is still delayed by cool, wet weather. Excessive rain in Manitoba has damaged crops extensively.

The report, last of the 1968 series of telegraphic reports on crop conditions across Canada, estimates wheat will be low-grade. Insufficient threshing has been done to assess the effect of the weather on average yields.

The information on which the report is based was gathered by a selected list of crop correspondents across the country and was telegraphed to Ottawa Tuesday night.

Last week the bureau reported a possible near-record wheat crop of 649,000,000 bushels but even then farmers were concerned that wet weather would lower grades and delay harvesting.

Agriculture Minister Olson made a quick trip to the Prairies during the weekend to assess the situation.

SATISFACTORY

Conditions throughout the remainder of the country are satisfactory, the bureau said.

In the Maritimes, recent rains have improved pastures and field crops. The potato harvest is light and blueberries and apples are small due to dry weather.

Quebec reports good yields of sugar beets and corn for grain. Pastures and hay are good and livestock are in good condition.

Wet, cool weather has delayed harvesting in British Columbia and grain yields are down.

A heavy potato crop is expected in coastal areas of British Columbia. Apples are good but peaches have been slow maturing due to cool weather.

Gilbey Appointment

Former Victoria hotel manager G. Nick North has been appointed western Canada marketing manager for Gilbey Canada Ltd. and will be located in Vancouver.

Mr. North resigned after six years as manager of Western International Hotels Ltd. Imperial Inn to devote himself to private interests. Prior to that he had been with other Western Hotels in Canada, the U.S. and Mexico. He was an honors graduate of Cornell University's hotel management course.

Transair Split

WINNIPEG (CP) — Harold C. Cope said he resigned as president of Transair Ltd. last week over policy differences between management and some directors.

He added: "There was an honest difference of opinion as to the timing of the acquisition of future equipment requirements."

Mr. Cope said the board of directors of the Winnipeg-based airline wanted to obtain aircraft to meet current marketing challenges for northern service. They wanted to be in a position to take advantage of traffic developments.

To meet the demand, Transair has purchased two Japanese-made YS-11 turbo-prop aircraft.

Molson Industries

Senator Hartland deM. Molson was named chairman of the board of Molson Industries Ltd. Wednesday, the new name of Molson Breweries Ltd.

D. M. Chenoweh is vice-chairman of the executive committee, and D. G. Willmot was appointed president and chief executive officer.

Senator Molson was chairman of the board of Molson Breweries Ltd. and Mr. Chenoweth was president. Mr. Willmot was president of Anthes Imperial Ltd., recently acquired by Molson's.

Molson Industries Ltd. will be structured into three operating groups: brewing, Canadian industrial and international industrial.

CNR Appointment

Donald F. Purves has been appointed vice-president of the mountain region, Canadian National Railways, effective Oct. 1.

Mr. Purves will replace G. R. Graham who is retiring after eight years as regional vice-president.

Mr. Purves is a commerce graduate of the University of British Columbia and received a masters degree in science from Columbia University.

Discovery Mines

Norman Byrne, a consulting engineer for Discovery Mines Ltd. of Toronto, says the company will close its operation near Yellowknife by June, 1969.

He said the mine was for years one of the richest gold producers in the world, "but now we've run out of gold."

Total production in its 18 years was just over 1 million ounces of gold valued at $36.08 million.

Mr. Byrne said the company may develop its nearby Camlaren property.

Sawmill Moving

EVERETT (AP) — A Washington sawmill will move to Tahsis because of pressure of the Japanese log market.

Washington Timber Products said the high cost of logs is forcing shutdown of the Everett mill due to "a lack of quality logs at prices the mill can afford to purchase—a condition caused by the heavy drain in Washington timber by Japanese . . ."

Tahsis Pulp and Paper Co. said in Vancouver the company plans to lease land for the U.S. firm and supply it with cedar logs. Details are being negotiated.

The mill, employing up to 130 at an annual payroll cost of $650,000, has been operating 21 years. It will close about Dec. 1, leaving a planing mill and dry kiln in operation.

Clyne Seeks Pacific Bloc

TORONTO (CP) — A Canadian lumber executive called today for inclusion of Japan in a Canada, the United States, free trad area involving Canada, the United States, Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand.

J. V. Clyne, chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., told the Canada-Japan Trade Council that such a move would bring advantages in resources, markets and industrial strength.

Said Mr. Clyne:

"If the United Kingdom does not join the EEC (European Economic Community) then a very good argument can be made for a formation of a free trade area between the United States, the United Kingdom and Canada.

"But the United States and Canada face not only the Atlantic Ocean, but the Pacific, and both oceans have similar attractions as avenues of trade . . . We should start our forward planning before it is too late."

Mr. Clyne also called for an end to "persuasion" used by Canada and the U.S. "to cause Japan to impose voluntary restraints on some of her own industries which are deemed competitive with ours."

Ford Will Produce New Car in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. will build a new car at its St. Thomas, Ont., plant, Henry Ford II, chairman of the parent Ford Motor Co., says.

There have been several reports recently that Ford was planning to introduce a new, smaller car to compete in North American markets with European and Japanese imports.

Sterling Soon Extinct

By CARL HARTMAN

BRUSSELS (AP) — The story is unfolding of how Britain will carry along the painful process of putting an end to the historic role of its pound as a leading currency in the world.

Some day, if all goes well, the pound will merge with the French and Belgian francs, the West German mark, the Dutch guilder and the Italian lira to form a new, strong European monetary unit. That would probably be the kind of money that smaller countries would gladly hold in their reserves.

The day is still far off. As long as Charles de Gaulle runs France, Britain's chances of joining the European Common Market are small.

Today 33 countries and colonies still use the pound as their main international trading unit. Besides most of the Commonwealth these include Israel and a number of Arab and some Asian countries. They are not happy about it.

When Britain devalued the pound last November, the value of their reserves dropped 14.3 per cent overnight. They don't want that to happen again.

RUSH TO SELL

Prime Minister Wilson's government doesn't mind shucking some of its responsibilities. Every time there is a new devaluation scare, or any financial news that makes other money look more attractive, there is a rush to sell pounds.

Often the Bank of England has to come into the market as a buyer to keep the price from going below the new post-devaluation minimum figure of $2.3825 U.S. to the pound. Britain has to sell its own gold or dollars when it does this, slimming its reserves.

The beginning of a way out was settled in Basel, Switzerland, this week. Central banks of 12 countries, led by the United States and West Germany, agreed to a $2,000,000,000 credit. It will enable the sterling area countries to get rid of some holdings and obtain a guarantee on the rest without hurting Britain too much.

When India, for example, earns dollars in world trade, it need no longer change them into pounds. It will be encouraged to deposit the dollars with the Bank for International Settlements in Basel. Gradually, India will find itself holding more dollars and fewer pounds.

Britain will be able to borrow dollars from the bank for its own needs. If the bank does not have enough, it will borrow in turn on Europe's lively Eurodollar market.

BORROW IN PINCH

In a pinch, the international bank can borrow from the 12 countries, including Canada, which have guaranteed the credit, though officials hope this will never be necessary.

At the end of three years, under the present scheme, the books on the deal will be closed. In the following seven years Britain will have to repay the dollars it has borrowed, with interest probably six or seven per cent depending on rates in the Eurodollar market.

Meanwhile, India and other sterling area countries likely will hold on to some of their pounds. To encourage this, Britain is guaranteeing them pounds to make up the difference between the value of the pound before and after any new devaluation.

They will have two other reasons for holding onto pounds.

They need quite a few for current trade, since a considerable commerce seems likely to be carried on in pounds for some years to come. Also they get better interest rates on pounds than on dollars.

How many million pounds of sterling-area holdings will be liquidated depends on the future of Britain's own economy.

If British exports go up and imports come down, the pound will be more stable and still attractive to other countries. If the reverse happens, there will be fears of new instability and new flight from the pound.

Cash for Britain

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — The Bank for International Settlements this week begins raising funds to make the $2 billion standby granted to Britain Monday fully operative.

The plan was drawn up by the central bankers of 12 nations and approved by the BIS Monday. Three methods have been indicated for raising the standby credit. These will have to be applied in the order suggested.

If the first two methods fail in part or altogether, the third method will be applied either partially or totally as circumstances demand.

The methods are:

1. The Bank of England will invite all holders of dollars balances in the sterling area to deposit them with the BIS in Basel.

The BIS will pay market rates for such deposits as long as they are in its possession. It will use these dollars as necessity arises to cover demands for convertibility coming from the sterling area under the standby guarantee.

2. If the first method doesn't work at all, or if it only helps raise part of the sum required, then BIS will borrow money from national markets, or possibly the Eurodollar market as well, and issue bills of exchange for the amounts borrowed.

3. If those methods still don't produce all the amount required to fund the standby, then BIS will fall back on the central banks, which will provide the rest of the money up to $2 billion.

U.S. Sold France Huge Gold Stock

WASHINGTON (AP) — France's hush-hush sale of gold to the United States in June turns out to have been far larger than speculation indicated.

The upper limit of guesses as to the size of the sale, necessitated to bolster the franc, was about $100 million.

But the U.S. treasury department's quarterly report on monetary gold transactions, released Tuesday, showed the actual figure to be $220 million.

Starting in 1962, France embarked on an aggressive policy of buying U.S. gold, coming around every month to exchange the dollars it held for bullion.

This eventually settled down to a pattern of purchasing at least $34 million every month, an outflow that seriously hurt the level of U.S. gold holdings.

But the French were able to keep up the pace only until September, 1966, when they stopped buying.

HALTED BUYING

From then until June the French government had no gold transactions with the United States.

The big June sale was caused by the French need to restore the value of the franc and make it convertible into other currencies at the rate insisted on by the International Monetary Fund.

Mutual Fund Bill Staggered

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON — A House commerce subcommittee has leveled an all but lethal blow at legislation providing greater regulation of the mutual funds industry.

In a surprise 4-2 vote, the subcommittee voted to not consider the bill further. It has been already passed by the Senate. Unless the full committee over-rules the subcommittee, and decides to take it up, the legislation will be a dead issue for the balance of the 90th Congress and perhaps for a long time to come.

The news cast a pall over the Securities and Exchange Commission which has been battling the mutual fund industry to achieve a greater measure of control over sales charges and management fees.

The SEC contends that the legislation is crucial to provide "A fairer shake" for thousands of less sophisticated investors who put their money in mutual funds. The industry, on the other hand, has fought the SEC every step of the way, and had succeeded in persuading the Senate to water down the SEC's original proposals.

As passed by the Senate, the bill:

- Gave authority to fix sales charges (commissions) to the National Association for Securities Dealers (the industry's self regulatory body) with the SEC in a supervisory role.
- Gave authority to the SEC to go to court to determine "reasonableness" of fees charged to the mutual funds by those who manage their assets.
- Provided that deductions for sales charges be limited to 20 per cent in any year and 64 per cent over the first four years.

Rep. John Moss (D—Calif.), chairman of the subcommittee, sharply criticized the action of the group. He called it "a complete abdication of legislative responsibility."

The only way in which the proposal can now be brought to the floor would be through a favorable consideration by the full committee, headed by Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D—W. Va.).

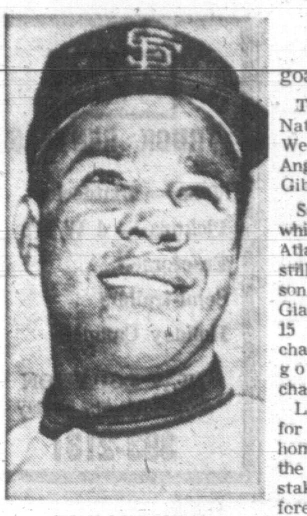
Cards' Number Four After Gibson Deals



JUAN MARICHAL
. . . Atlanta's jinx holds

By The Associated Press

It's a cinch St. Louis Cardinals will reach their goal but doubtful that Juan Marichal will make it to his.

The Cardinals reduced their National League pennant to four Wednesday night by nipping Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4 for Bob Gibson's 21st victory of the year.

San Francisco Giants, meanwhile, dropped a 3-1 decision to Atlanta Braves with Marichal, still hoping for a 30-victory season, taking the loss. It left the Giant ace at 25-8 and with only 15 games remaining, his chances for 30 are about as good as San Francisco's chances of catching St. Louis.

LA strafed the St. Louis ace for 11 hits including a leadoff homer by Willie Crawford. But the Cards bounced right back, staking Gibson to a 5-1 lead before the Dodgers made a late run at him.

Lou Brock's two-run double broke a 1-1 tie in the second and doubles by Orlando Cepeda and Tim McCarver helped build two more runs in the third.

END JUAN'S HOPES

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, where Marichal hasn't won in two years, the Braves just about ended any hopes the Dominican Dandy might have entertained about 30 victories.

Hank Aaron tagged his 27th home run—a two-run shot in the third inning—and Pat Jarvis limited the Giants to four hits.

The homer was the 508th of Aaron's career and his first off Marichal by his count in three years.

In other action Wednesday, New York Mets blanked Chicago Cubs 1-0, Cincinnati Reds swept a twi-night doubleheader from Houston Astros, 5-1 and 11-6 and Philadelphia Phillies split a twinighter with Pittsburgh Pirates, winning the opener 8-6 in 12 innings and dropping the nightcap, 6-4.

Gibson's victory over the Dodgers opened the Cardinal lead to 11½ games and made the pennant clinching party to a weekend likelihood.

YANKS ON MOVE

In the American League, Fritz Peterson's fifth straight victory carried the hot New York Yankees to a 7-2 nod over Chicago White Sox and to within sight of third place. It was New York's sixth straight triumph in a late-season drive (25 of 35) that has carried them from seventh to fifth place.

Elsewhere, Willie Horton's 34th and 35th homers led first-place Detroit Tigers to an 8-2 romp over California Angels; Baltimore Orioles swept a doubleheader from Washington Senators 6-1 and 4-1 in 10 innings; Oakland Athletics edged Boston Red Sox 3-2 in 12 innings and Cleveland Indians nipped Minnesota Twins 1-0 in 12.

Detroit's victory reduced Tigers' magic number to eight. They lead second-place Baltimore by eight lengths with 15 games remaining.

ROSE HITS HARD

Lee May's bases-loaded double drove in three runs and Gary Nolan won his ninth game as Cincinnati beat Houston in the first game of their twi-nighter.

The Reds completed the sweep with a six-run eighth inning snapping a 5-5 tie in the nightcap. Johnny Bench and Vada Pinson socked key doubles in the rally.

Pete Rose had four hits in the doubleheader, raising his total for the season to 190. He is batting .343.

Bill White's RBI single and a two-run double by pinch hitter Gary Sutherland in the 12th inning gave the Phillies their first game victory over Pittsburgh.

The Pirates salvaged the split as Steve Blass won his 15th game with relief help from Luke Walker.

Draws Order of Day In Pro Boot Playoffs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nobody's won one and everybody was 1-1 in the North American Soccer League playoffs today.

In the opening round of the playoffs Wednesday night, Kansas City and San Diego played to a 1-1 tie in the Western Conference while Atlanta and Cleveland battled to a 1-1 deadlock in the Eastern Conference.

Each is a two-game series with the winner determined by the highest number of goals. In the event of a second-game tie, there will be a 30-minute overtime followed by a sudden-death period if still deadlocked.

A penalty kick by Manfred Rummer at 29:27 of the first half gave Kansas City the lead over San Diego. However, San Diego scored at 4:42 of the second half on a six-yard effort by Jose Lopez. A crowd of 5,041 watched the action in Kansas City. The second game will be played in San Diego Monday night.

Willie McIntosh scored for Atlanta and Amancio Cid for Cleveland in the game at Cleveland before 3,341 spectators. The deciding game is in Atlanta Saturday afternoon.

Ellis Favored To Keep Title

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Jimmy Ellis has become a 2-to-1 favorite here to retain his piece of the world heavyweight title in a defence against two-time champion Floyd Patterson Saturday.

Leeds First to Win Inter-Cities Trophy

BUDAPEST (Reuters) — Leeds United became the first British soccer club to win the Inter-Cities Fairs Cup Wednesday night when they played a scoreless draw with Ferencvaros of Hungary to win the two-leg final, 1-0, on aggregate.

Defeated finalists in the 1966-67 cup, Leeds defied the Hungarian champions with an unyielding defence and carried off the cup on the strength of their 1-0 victory in the first leg in England Aug. 7.

The match was the final of the 1967-68 competition and Leeds now begins defence of their newly-won crown with a first-round game against Standard Liege of Belgium in the 1968-69 tournament.

English soccer now enjoys an elevated position unmatched by any other country. The Inter-Cities Fairs Cup is added to the European Cup won by Manchester United during last season and the World Cup won by England in 1966.

WILL USE GAMES . . . . . . AS LEVER

Students Issue Threat

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Striking Mexico City college students warned the Mexican government Wednesday they plan to use the approaching Olympic Games as a lever to force concessions from President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz.

The student leaders, in delivering the warning, left an implied threat of demonstrations during the Games if no progress has been made.

"We are not about to back down in our fight for democratic liberties now that we have in our favor the fact that each day is closer to the arrival of the contingents which will participate in the Olympics," leaders of the strike movement told a news conference.

Another massive demonstration is planned for Friday afternoon and, the leaders said, "we are sure there will be no repression by the public forces because by that day dozens of foreign journalists and a committee from the Soviet Union will have arrived."

The students are demanding liberation of political prisoners, dismissal of three Mexico City police chiefs, disbandment of the riot police, payments of indemnity to those injured in earlier rioting and protection of university autonomy.

Reel Breaks Down After Six Hours In Tuna Struggle

YARMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Despite a heart-breaking setback Wednesday, the Mexican team continued to hold the lead going into the third day of the international tuna cup match today.

The team's 860-pounder, boated Tuesday, is good for 860 points, and perhaps a bonus of 200 if it turns out to be the biggest taken in the five-day big league fishing tournament.

The British Caribbean team is second with a 756-pound bluefin, also caught Tuesday. Both were taken off nearby Cape St. Mary.

Juan San Juan, 44, of Mexico City was barely 50 yards out from the Cape St. Mary wharf Wednesday morning when a huge tuna struck his bait.

On board the boat with him was Juan Posada who caught the 860-pound fish the day before. Posada said San Juan's fish looked even bigger than his.

At 4:10 p.m., after six hours of playing the untiring fish with the 130-pound test line, San Juan's reel began to break down. At the same time fog came rolling in, it began to rain heavily and the wind increased to 20 knots and more.

At the seven-hour and 55-minute mark of the marathon struggle, the tuna was less than 30 feet from the boat. Just then the boat pitched on a big wave, the fish dove and the line snapped.

The tuna were plentiful again Wednesday at the cape, while the fish famine continued at Wedgeport, 15 miles south of here.

Ten boats are fishing out of the cape in Bay of Fundy water, while five are fishing the world-famed Soldier's Rip and Tusket River out of Wedgeport.

Teams entered in the match include defending champion United States, Canada, Mexico, the British Caribbean and Italy.

Competition for the Alton B. Sharp trophy, emblematic of tuna fishing supremacy, will end Saturday.

Weather Threatens Tour Finale

WOODBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Canada's top 12 professionals may have to wear rubber boots instead of golf shoes when they tee off Friday in the $15,000 Canadian tour golf championship.

Recent heavy rainfall has soaked the Board of Trade Country Club course here and superintendent George Clark said Wednesday he is worried about getting the mowers to work on the 6,563-yard layout.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg, one of the 12 competitors, said the course seemed to be playing longer than usual during a practice round Wednesday.

Professionals entered besides Homenuik: Stan Homenuik, Dauphin, Man.; Bob Breen, Woodbridge; Bill Wakeham, Victoria; Trevor Bateman, Montreal; Vaughan Trapp, Victoria; Moe Norman, Gilford, Ont.; Bob Cox Jr., Vancouver; John Henrick, Montreal; Alvie Thompson, Toronto; Len Harvey, Regina, and Wayne Vollmer, Vancouver.

Vanderstock broke by three-tenths of a second the mark set by Rex Cawley in 1964.

Boyd Gittins was second in the race, barely beating Ron Whitney of the Southern California Striders.

Gittins' time was 49.1, equalling the recognized world record.

Runt Roughs Up Powerful Riders

Rookie Quarter Guides Eskimos To 25-20 Upset

EDMONTON (CP) — A self-acclaimed "runt" from the University of Tennessee gave Edmonton Eskimos their first home win of the season Wednesday night—a 25-20 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders.

Charlie Fulton, with 180 pounds on his 5' 11" frame, connected with 14 of 18 passes, one of them an 85-yard pass-and-run touchdown play to Larry Plancke.

The 21-year-old rookie, playing his second professional game in the starting slot, was shaken up in his own territory with less than three minutes left to play, but trainers said he was just winded. Frank Cosentino finished the game for him.

Edmonton went into the game with three wins, four defeats and a tie and third place in the Western Conference standings. Ottawa had four wins and one loss and a two-point lead in the Eastern Conference.

STANDING UNCHANGED

The victory left Edmonton still in third place, but with nine points, only one behind Calgary Stampeders. Saskatchewan has 11 points for first place. Ottawa came out of it still first in the East with eight points, two ahead of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Montreal Alouettes and Toronto Argonauts.

Rough Riders opened the scoring midway through the first quarter when Russ Jackson, who clicked with only eight of 21 passes, drilled an 18-yarder into the hands of Vic Washington for a touchdown. Don Sutherin converted.

The Eskimos were forced into a kicking situation about three minutes later. Ottawa took the ball in their own end zone and ran it out 14 yards where it was fumbled. Edmonton's Greenard Poles pounced on the loose ball and two plays later Art Perkins was over. Peter Kempf made it 7-7 and the quarter closed out that way.

The Edmonton kicker added another point at 2:41 of the second stanza when a field goal attempt went wide and Billie Cooper conceded the point. Later in the quarter, Ottawa pulled ahead 10-8 on a 32-yard field goal from Sutherin.

Edmonton pushed to the Ottawa 39 in four plays where Fulton floated a 38-yard pass to Jim Thomas on the Ottawa one yard line and then kept the ball for a touchdown of his own which Kempf failed to complement.

SCOTT FINALLY SCORES

In the third quarter, Jackson gave the ball to Bo Scott who charged in to the one where Edmonton held Ottawa for two plays before Scott finally scored. Sutherin got his second convert and fifth point of the game.

Ottawa's lead before 18,600 fans was short-lived. Less than two minutes after, Fulton let loose with his 85-yard combination to Plancke and Kempf made it 21-17 at 13:32.

Sutherin scored his second field goal at 3:29 of the last quarter to draw Ottawa to within one point of Edmonton, but Kempf added three more points for Edmonton at 12:05 and Garry Lefabvre scored a single with four seconds left for extra insurance.

In an interview Tuesday night, Fulton said that if he didn't make it as a quarterback with Edmonton, he would play any slot they wanted.

"If I have to scramble . . . I will." And he did.

Guys With Hair Always Find One Who Isn't Fair

By The Canadian Press

Punch Imlach, manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, has this thing about hair.

Last year at training camp he ordered defenceman Jim McKenny to get a haircut.

Wednesday, the thin-on-top Imlach, issued another edict: No sideburns.

At the club's Peterborough camp Wednesday, Imlach ordered goalie Bruce Gamble, left winger Wayne Carleton, goalie George Gardner, forward Gerry Meehan, defenceman Mike Pelyk and McKenny to the barber shop.

PUNCH IMLACH
. . . no sideburns

The 25 players on hand got a glimpse of what awaits them starting today when two physical education instructors arrived from Royal Military College in Kingston.

With them came medicine balls, tug-of-war ropes, weighted artillery casings, mats and parallel bars.

Team captain George Armstrong looked at the equipment and said: "I think I'll go into voluntary retirement."

Armstrong, still unsigned, weighed 207 pounds, about 15 more than his usual playing weight.

The main body of players report Monday, bringing the number in camp to about 94.

Minnesota North Stars, stopping briefly in Toronto before going to camp to Haliburton, Ont., Friday, announced the signing of two defencemen, brothers Larry and Wayne Hillman.

In Barrie, Ont., coach Red Kelly of Los Angeles Kings said he's "trying for more firepower on the wings" this season.

He plans to move defenceman Dale Rolfe to forward, and centre Bryan Campbell to a wing. Then Real Lemieux will move to right wing, a position he has played before.

Kelly said the three will be used at their new positions extensively during the club's exhibition schedule.

STILL HASN'T SIGNED

Right winger Lowell MacDonald, who earlier threatened to retire unless his salary demands were met, showed up Wednesday, still unsigned. He said he had been delayed on his way from New Brunswick.

In Montreal, more than 100 players start training at two locations today.

The Canadiens' camp is so big the NHL club and a select group of hopefuls will train at one camp and the Central Professional League Houston Apollos and assorted junior applicants will work out at another.

In Ottawa, coach Scotty Bowman of St. Louis Blues announced he is taking his club to St. Andrews, N.B., for the first week of training.

Shasta Gives Extra Time

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shasta Sports Inc., of California Wednesday gave a Vancouver group an additional 10 days in which to acquire control of Vancouver's North American Soccer League franchise.

Shasta owns 55 per cent of Western Professional Soccer Ltd., which operates Vancouver Royals. Vancouver interests hold the remainder and had been given until Wednesday to buy Shasta out.

Brig. E. G. Eakins, Royals president, said the campaign to raise local funds was still "far short of success." But he said the club thinks the extra 10 days will allow the money to be raised.

WHL Owners Agree To Players' Demands

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Western Hockey League owners and players settled differences Tuesday, ending a threatened boycott by the players' association.

League president Al Leader issued this statement as the League concluded a two-day meeting:

"The owners of the Western Hockey League and representatives of the players have come to a mutually satisfactory agreement regarding player benefits and any other differences that they might have had."

Kurt Leichner, attorney for the players' association, said: "The meeting was amicable as far as the players are concerned. We're very happy with the outcome."

Leader said all players will report on schedule to training camp next week.

Appeal Time Extended By Racing Commission

VANCOUVER (CP) — The official 48-hour appeal period Wednesday expired for two jockeys and a horse owner charged by Exhibition Park stewards with race-fixing, but the British Columbia Racing Commission said the principles could appeal at a forthcoming commission hearing.

Glen MacDonald, commission chairman, said the three men involved will be allowed to appeal the stewards' recommendations up to and including the time the commission sits.

"We're looking for a date next week," Mr. MacDonald said, adding that the commission "never holds anybody" to the official 48-hour period in which to appeal.

Lifetime bans are sought by the stewards against jockey William H. Skuse, 29, of Richmond and horse-owner Ming Chong, a Vancouver grocery store operator. A five-year ban is recommended against jockey Dennis L. Terry, 28, also of Richmond.

The stewards, who brought the charges under the Rules and Regulations of Horse Racing, can levy fines of up to $200 and suspensions of up to a year — and only at their own track.

Since, in this case, they seek suspensions of more than a year, they will take the case to the B.C. Racing Commission. The commission can order the suspension to apply at any affiliated track in the world.

The stewards findings against the three were announced Monday in a statement by Merv Peters, Exhibition Park's Director of Racing.

Mr. Peters said evidence against the three was gathered from races run on Aug. 22, 26 and 28.

SEVEN CHARGES

Skuse faces a total of seven charges under the Rules and Regulations of Horseracing.

They include:

- Consorting with persons who have been convicted of criminal offenses;
- Questionable transactions on the turf;
- Conduct not in the best interest of racing;
- Engaging in any irregular betting transaction;
- Refusing to disclose contents of wearing apparel.

FACE FEWER CHARGES

Terry was charged with breaking four rules, and Chong faces three charges, including one which states, "No person shall instruct, induce or connive with a jockey to ride a corrupt race."

Charges laid under the Rules and Regulations of Horse Racing are within the jurisdiction of the track stewards and the racing commission. Any criminal charges must be laid by police.

Peterborough Two Games Up

OSHAWA (CP)—Peterborough Lakers took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven National Lacrosse Association Eastern Division semi-finals Wednesday night, defeating Montreal Canadiens 9-6.

The teams were tied, 2-2, at the end of the first period before Peterborough scored five goals in the second to take a 7-3 lead before 1,544 fans.

Joe Todd paced Peterborough with two goals. Single goals were scored by Harris Hunter, Larry Ferguson, Terry Downer, Bob Allan, Jim Grady, John Davis and Ken Henderson.

Montreal scorers were Brian Aherne, Ron Roy, Wayne Thompson, Jim Richardson, Joe Hore and Bill Castator.

Third game is scheduled for Peterborough Friday night.

Standouts were goaltenders Bob McCready of Montreal and Peterborough's Pat Baker. McCready stopped 46 shots while Baker blocked 31.

Roy was injured late in the third period after taking a heavy check from Jim Gooley and was helped off the floor.

Club championship struggles will occupy the spotlight this weekend at Greater Victoria golf courses as Royal Colwood stages its qualifying round and first-round matches are played at Uplands, Gorge Vale and Victoria.

Eastern Dandies Dominate Scoring

Mike Gates was best in the west and John Davis steps up as the east's champion in the final National Lacrosse Association scoring parade.

Davis sparked the eastern division's domination by scoring a whopping 174 points, including 81 goals and 93 assists, to emerge as the overall champion.

Gates topped the west with 138 points, eight more than New Westminster's Paul Parnell. Victoria's Ranjit Dillon, the Inter-City League's top gunner last season, was third with 116 points.

Victoria's Bill Gray and Jim Grady of Peterborough shared "badman" honors, each serving 161 minutes in penalties.

Merv Schweitzer of Portland (.772) and Skip Chapman of Vancouver (.770) had the best goaltending average among regulars. Pat Baker of Peterborough was the east's leader with a .758 mark although Merv Marshall posted a spectacular .785 average in his 12-game tryout stint with Detroit.

ROSEMARY's BABY
Restricted
Royal Theatre

Here is a chiller about the powers of darkness winnowed from Ira Levin's best-selling novel by Polish director Roman Polanski.

A steely-white gleam of horror pervades the whole thing and Satan, it seems, is very much alive and intent on making Rosemary's life miserable.

From the moment Rosemary (Mia Farrow) and her husband (John Cassavetes) move into an apartment in Manhattan's Central Park, the atmosphere grows more and more menacing, and it transpires that the old house has an unsavory history of suicides and diabolical happenings, including the murder of a wicked Satanist.

Rosemary becomes more and more imprisoned in an irrational world, but whether one of her own devising or whether as the pawn of satanic forces it is hard to determine.

Under Polanski's creative direction, this macabre world takes on credibility through various grotesque characters who are often humorously drawn.

One is Ruth Gordon as Rosemary's coarsely evil neighbor, sniffing for information like a rodent, croaking out advice like some old crow.

It is Gordon, in fact, who forces Rosemary to drink her satanic herbal brews when she becomes pregnant, and what follows is undoubtedly the most unpleasant pregnancy on record.

Polanski uses ingenious cinematic effects to heighten the grotesque atmosphere. Sometimes Farrow's face is photographed through a convex lens to distort and enlarge her features and her complexion takes on a greenish hue.

Dream sequences, peopled with ghostly figures, are surrealistic and swift-moving. The dialogue is minimal, with little exposition.

Horrible as it is, Mia Farrow gives a fine, sensitive performance and Ralph Bellamy behind a full grey beard, is a sinister figure as Dr. Sapirstein, the evil obstetrician.

Motion Picture Schedule Given

Educational films will be shown Friday and Sunday during an open meeting at the Thomas More Centre, 4053 Gordon Head Road, starting at 8:30 p.m. Discussion periods will be held following the films. An earlier announcement stated incorrectly the films would be shown Friday and Saturday.

MONUMENTAL, like the Eiffel Tower, was how Maurice Chevalier was described on his 80th birthday today, which coincides with the age of the famous tower. White-haired, straight and solid as an oak, the entertainer has just returned to Paris after a song-and-dance tour through South America and Canada, still singing "Thank Heaven for Little Girls."

TV SNUB FOR FROST

LONDON (CP) — David Frost, biggest entertainment name in Britain's commercial television, has been given the cold shoulder by four networks from London to Yorkshire. Frost's weekend interview programs will be replaced by comedy and variety shows in an attempt to regain millions of viewers lost to BBC when the commercial channels were partly blacked out by a technicians' strike last month.

CBC Correspondent Weds Moscow Girl

MOSCOW (UPI) — Canadian correspondent David Halton today was married to Russian girl Natasha Titova in a Moscow wedding palace.

Halton, 28, has been Moscow correspondent for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation since September, 1967. He met 24-year-old Natasha eight months ago.

Diefenbaker Spurns Offer of Fat TV Fee

OTTAWA (Special)—The privately-owned CTV television network Wednesday confirmed rumors that it tried to get John Diefenbaker as its star commentator for the opening of Parliament today.

The former prime minister was intrigued with the idea but the negotiations failed. Despite a fee described as "attractively fat," Diefenbaker didn't think it would be proper for a leading parliamentarian to "go commercial."

The Conservative warhorse favors the televising of Parliamentary debates, but with no sponsors and no pay to either the network or the MPs.

Canadian Artists Seek British Acclaim

LONDON (CP) — A number of Canadian performers are out to show that words and music composed by artists in their homeland have something to offer a British audience concerned about love in the modern world.

Already the group, currently led by producer Louis Negin of Toronto, has performed Canadian works in a London pub as part of an effort to increase Canada's cultural reputation here.

Now Negin is preparing a show scheduled for Sunday night at a performing arts centre, the Round House.

Negin feels that his offering of works ranging from the writings of Stephen Leacock to a song by French-Canada's Gilles Vigneault will arouse British interest in Canada's art life. All the offerings will be on a theme of "Love and Maple Syrup"—the refrain chosen as the production's over all title.

Performers will include Miranda Davies, daughter of Robertson Davies of Peterborough, Ont.

Also in the cast will be Sean Hewitt of Matheson, Ont., Margaret Robertson of Vancouver and Polish-born Irena Mayeska, who has performed at the Stratford, Ont., festival. Hewitt is featured in the current London production of the musical, Cabaret.

Negin came to Britain last year on a Canada Council grant designed to give him the opportunity of seeing how Britain's theatrical industry works.

Besides Vigneault and Leacock, Canadian creators whose works are featured in the Round House production include Calgary-born Earle Birney, Louis Dudek, Irving Layton and F. R. Scott of Montreal; French-Canada's Anne Hebert; Folksinger Gordon Lightfoot, and Leonard Cohen of Montreal, who combines singing with writing in poetry and prose.

PROVIDING buoyancy for this balloon is a king-size job under any circumstances. A plastic feeder hose fed helium gas into the world's largest balloon, which was launched this week at White Sands missile range at Las Cruces, N.M. The balloon is expected to set a new balloon altitude record of 160,000 feet before its flight terminates near Tucson, Ariz.

Canada Ahead in Transplant Serum Work

By BARBARA BLACK

MONTREAL (CP) — An energetic young Montreal scientist says Canada could become a world leader in the production of anti-lymphacyte serum, a life-saving preparation for human-organ transplant patients.

Dr. Gilles Lamoureux, 34, is director of the immunodiagnostic laboratory at the Institue of Microbiology and Hygiene affiliated with the University of Montreal.

He says the new serum — called ALS for short—is being produced at breakneck speed in laboratories around the world and will be officially ready for Canadian consumption in January.

ALS, he says, will attack the most important problem in organ transplants, the body's formation of antibodies to combat and reject grafted material.

"Actual transplant operations, involving say a heart or a kidney, are relatively simple," says Dr. Lamoureux.

"The difficulty is in matching the antigenic formula a kind of blood type, only it applies to the body's immunization system — of the new organ with the old one to minimize the danger of antibodies being built up to kill the new cells."

Transplant patients can be protected by using drugs to "freeze" the whole immunization system of the body, including the lymph nodes and spleen.

A less-dangerous method of preventing rejection seems to be ALS, which allows the body to continue fighting other harmful bacteria.

"The principle of ALS was actually discovered early in the century, but it was forgotten until 1964, when an Englishman named Woodruff started obtaining it from rabbits and mice," says Dr. Lamoureux.

To obtain ALS for human patients, human cells are introduced into a live horse. The horse's immunization system builds up antibodies to meet the human cells, and serum can be extracted from the horse which will help the bodies of human patients tolerate newly transplanted organs.

Horses and cows are used in place of Woodruff's rabbits and mice because they produce a higher volume of serum. About 20 horses now are roaming the paddock outside the institute in suburban Montreal.

"We're working right now on purifying ALS. But did you know that the horse serum you get when you are treated for snake-bite, or when you're vacinated against diphtheria, isn't purified?

"ALS will be especially pure because it will have to be given to a patient again and again to keep him alive for the first three critical months. When a transplant patient has survived three months, he has a good chance of living much longer."

The painstaking purification process — testing individual horses, selecting the right antibodies from the raw serum to eliminate those which could destroy red blood cells — follows two years of intensive study, partially financed by a National Research Council grant.

Dr. Lamoureux says that in January a "pool" of the best serum produced by the institute and Connaught Laboratories in Toronto will be sent for final tests to a centre set up in The Netherlands to establish international standards for ALS.

Flowers for Rocks

By HILDA BEASTALL

The dwarf carpeting thymes are more often used as fillers for paving cracks and rock steps than in association with other plants.

Hilda

Since thymes will get along well in stony banks and full sun, it should not be too difficult to imagine their use as an underplanting for other things of similar requirements.

One class of plants which should make a perfect association is the winter crosus, and since it lacks yellow in its color range, why not add the sternbergia with its sunny crocus-like flower form?

Another bulb liking good drainage and summer sun is the lovely fall blooming colchicum, now so beautiful with its masses of soft pinky mauve goblets.

With the different shades of grey and green of the creeping thymes, colonies of these bulbs would soon spread over a wide area, such as in crevices of rocky outdrops, or on sloping banks where little else will be suitable.

So long as the area is fairly clear of weedy growth, a start could be made now by putting in rooted pieces of creeping thyme in the shallower soil pockets.

Deeper pockets can be planted with groups of three dwarf Iris reticulata, snowdrops, scillas, ipheions (formerly triteleias), as well as the winter crocuses.

In fact, an interested gardener could well start a hobby of collecting Mediterranean bulbs to add to a site where he starts the various creeping thymes on their career.

Full sun and good drainage, with a slope towards south or southwest would probably give best results since it would escape the worst of the coldest winter winds.

Volunteers Enjoyed Jungle Work

By MARGARET BARNARD

HALIFAX (CP) — Would you like to spend your vacation in an isolated jungle camp, doing physical labor in hot, humid weather?

Seven young Halifax men and women tried it, and had the time of their lives this summer.

As volunteers in the YMCA's World Service program, the group went to Caracas, Venezuela, to renovate a camp for underprivileged children. The camp was two hours' drive from Caracas at Santa Barbara Del Tuey.

"Down there, we'd never tell you it was fun, but looking back, it was like something in a book," Paul Hamilton, 23-year-old history student at St. Mary's University here said.

Paul passed up two good summer jobs because of the travel and adventure promised by the South American projects. He also figures he spent about $150 of his own money, though food, board and most travelling expenses were paid.

The group of four men and three girls spent 10 days in the run-down camp, built 15 years ago by Presbyterian missionaries and not used for the last six years.

The men cleared the overgrown recreation field with machetes, the broad, sharp knives used in cutting through jungle undergrowth; they fixed wiring and plumbing and mended leaking roofs and bunkhouses, while the girls whitewashed walls and ceilings.

Robert Nauss, 20, an Institute of Technology student, says he learned enough Spanish "to get by" from the Venezuelan volunteers who also helped repair the camp.

GROUP VARIED

In the Halifax group were a social worker, a teacher, a policeman, a dental assistant, an X-ray technician and the two students.

After a hard day's work in the intense heat, which both young students said they found almost unbearable at first, they were ready for bed at 7:30 p.m.

Some evenings they stayed up until nine, talking to their Venezuelan counterparts with the help of a Spanish-English dictionary, and singing.

It was difficult to become acclimatized to the heat, the insects, the unaccustomed diet and a whole new way of life, Paul said.

Insects were everywhere, and flies swarmed over cutlery, china and food as the group ate their meals of black beans and rice, stews, mangoes, green bananas and corn on the cob.

It was the wet season and it rained twice a day, but that was delightful.

"We would stand up in the rain with all our clothes on and cool off," Paul recalled.

After their work at the camp ended, the Presbyterian Church gave them a house in Caracas for 10 days of sightseeing, and they had a holiday week in Trinidad before flying home.

CAMP DEDICATED

Before they left Santa Barbara Del Tuey, 200 people from a nearby village came to the camp's dedication.

"They were so appreciative of what we'd done—that made it all worth while," Bob Nauss said.

Bob and Paul said that besides the adventure, what impressed them most about their trip was the attitude of the people they met.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Wives Too Much For Great Leaders

By BOB BOWMAN

Champlain and Frontenac were two of Canada's greatest governors. They knew how to handle men, but their wives were too much for them! Helen Champlain, after whom St. Helen's Island, the site of Expo '67 was named, stayed in Quebec for only four years. Champlain mentioned her only twice in his diary: the day she arrived, and the day she left!

Frontenac, who was appointed Governor of Canada Sept. 12, 1672, served two terms at Quebec and died there in 1698. His wife never came to Canada with him, but on his death he left instructions that his heart should be cut out and sent to her in Paris. This was done. The heart was encased in lead and sent to her, but Madame Frontenac refused to accept it. She said that he did not want a heart in death that had never been hers in life. So Frontenac's heart was sent back to Quebec and replaced in his body which was buried in the crypt of the Recollets.

France would have lost Canada long before 1763 if it had not been for Frontenac. One of the most colorful stories about him is when he repulsed an invasion by William Phips in 1690. Supported by England (the name "Britain" is used after 1707) Phips raised a force in New England and arrived off Quebec with an armada of 32 ships.

A lieutenant was sent on shore with a message to Frontenac demanding his surrender. Frontenac had him blindfolded and rushed through the streets, climbing over obstacles, until he was breathless. The blindfold was removed when he arrived at the Citadel, and there Frontenac received him. Some of the greatest men in the history of French Canada were standing by his side: Jacques and Charles Le Moyne, de Ramesay, Subercase, Mantet, and Hertel among others. When Frontenac read the message to surrender he said "I will reply by the mouths of my canon." The messenger was blindfolded again and rushed back to his ship.

Phips did not have the military experience to cope with Frontenac and had to sail back to New England a few days later.

Other events on September 12:

1696—Pierre Le Moyne d'Iberville arrived at Placentia to begin Newfoundland campaign.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to David Proctor, age 11, of Lansing, Michigan, for his question:

How thick is the earth's hardened crust?

It is not hard to imagine a solid planetary globe almost 8,000 miles wide. This is the earth below its crusty surface skin. But young thinkers, trained scientists and almost everybody else are baffled by different problems. Beginners grasp the fact that the crust is the surface ground on which we live. It rests on layers of heavier and apparently hotter levels below. We feel more comfortable when we ignore them, together with the seething core in the centre of the globe. Nevertheless, our early concept of the crusty skin prods us with tantalizing questions.

We wonder whether it is secure, or whether it may suddenly slip and dunk us into the unthinkable levels below. The answer is no. Earth scientists are still baffled about many features of the crust, but they know for sure that it rests safely on the surface and cannot, just cannot, sink. For one thing, it is made of the planet's lightest rock, which floats on heavier layers like rafts of cork on the sea.

The sea teases us with another set of questions. We may suspect that the ocean beds dip below the crustal skin. Here again the earth scientists have comforting promises. The deep sea basins lie almost three miles below the waves but none of them go through the crust. Now we can relax and consider the thickness of the crust. This, however, happens to be one of the topics most baffling to the experts.

Uneven Crust

The deepest mines and wells have not pierced through it and nobody has been down to take on-the-spot measurements of its thickness. But we have indirect evidence from earthquake vibrations on the density of deep levels. Plumb lines that reveal variations in gravity also yield useful clues. These indirect clues prove without doubt that the thickness of the earth's crust varies from maybe five to 40 miles. Experts are still working on the immense job of measuring the total 197 million square miles of the earth's surface.

Our present evidence reveals thin patches of soil and scratchy dirt on the land and thin layers of oozy mud on the seabeds. The rocky crust of the continents has a lighter layer above a heavier layer. Its thickness varies from 10 miles under the flat plains to 40 miles under the massive mountains. Its overall average is about 20 miles. The crust under the oceans is estimated to be from three to five miles thick. It is a single layer of the heavier crustal rocks and very, very sturdy.

The uneven thickness of the crust poses a lot of questions and suggests a lot of answers. With other data, it suggests that earth forces try to even up the world-wide weight of the crusty skin. The lighter continents appear to balance their weight against that of the thin heavier crust under the sea. Massive mountains are lightweights. They appear to balance the thinner, heavier crust of the plains and their roots dip down like anchors, sometimes 40 miles into the deep, denser layer of the crust.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Lise Mitchell, age 10, of Houston, Texas, for her question:

What is a Mercator's map?

A map should show its proper place on the globe and this requires a network of numbered lines of latitude and longitude. The map and the gridwork of lines together form a projection. A mercator projection shows equal distances between the parallel circles of latitude, which is accurate. But it also allocates equal distances between the longitudes — and this is inaccurate. The meridians of longitude taper from their widest separations at the equator and meet each other at the poles. The mercator projection gives a neat, flat map of the globe. But its east-west distances are distorted.

Countries near the equator, where the latitudes and longitudes are about equal, are accurately projected. Distortions increase in higher latitudes where narrow areas are stretched to fit the wider longitudes at the equator. Small islands in the Arctic are portrayed much bigger than their actual size. And Greenland looks big enough to be a continent — which it is not. Several other grids have been invented to show more accurate map projections. One of these shows the globe sliced into curved sections that link at the equator and taper towards the poles.

DICTATOR AILING

Successor to Salazar Becomes Urgent Question

LISBON (AP)—For years the Portuguese have been asking, "Who comes after Salazar?" Now the question has unprecedented urgency, and there is still no answer.

The 79-year-old premier, the world's most durable dictator, lies in a Lisbon hospital following surgery last Saturday to remove a blood clot beside the brain.

Each succeeding medical bulletin says he is doing well, but due to his age and the delicacy of the operation, there is speculation that the "Senhor Doctur" may be left with some disability that will in effect mean the end of the Salazar era.

The average citizen finds it difficult to imagine Portugal without Antonio de Oliveria Salazar. No Portuguese under 40 has known any other national leader.

The mark of his coldly analytical mind, iron will and austere personality is everywhere in Portugal's authoritarian "corporate state."

The question of who will follow him has vast importance, not only for this country of 10 million struggling to catch up with the prosperity of the rest of Western Eruope.

It also has a bearing on Portugal's huge African territories. Many believe only Salazar's determination can withstand African nationalism and foreign anti-colonialist opinion and keep Angola and Mozambique.

Salazar has made no discernible move to groom a successor. Under the constitution, President Americo Thomaz can appoint a premier if Salazar dies or resigns. But there is no evidence that he and Salazar have reached an agreement on who it will be.

ONLY A FEW

A handful of men are considered possible successors.

The latest to join the list, and some say the favorite, is Joao Antunes Varela, 49, a law professor who was justice minister until last year. He is said to have the respect of both the establishment and the opposition.

Two other men often mentioned are Marcello Caetano and Adiano Moreira, both also former cabinet ministers.

Minister's Wife Looks Like Co-ed

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP)—A slim brunette with shoulder-length hair simply styled, 26-year-old Mrs. Otto Lang, wife of the new federal minister without portfolio, has a combination of openness and poise which gives her a special kind of charm.

The impression is heightened by her graceful movements, slender hands and long-lashed eyes which look blue in some lights, grey in others. Her face is lightly sprinkled with freckles and sparked at times by a broad smile.

Because she looks like a stylish university co-ed, it is hard to believe she is the mother of four children, let alone a cabinet minister's wife.

But Adrian Lang grew up in "a very political family."

"My grandfather and my mother both sat in the Saskatchewan legislature," she said in an interview after a house-hunting bout.

"My mother was also Canadian delegate to the UN last year. She's a very bright woman—one of the people I admire most.

"She did an excellent job of raising us considering we had no father. He was killed in the Battle of the Bulge in 1944, a month after my brother was born. He was a captain in the British Army."

Mrs. Lang's mother, Mrs. Sally Merchant, now is assistant director of development at the University of Saskatchewan.

TRAVELLED WEST

Mrs. Lang was born in Halifax. When her father went overseas, the 2½-year-old child travelled with her mother to Yorkton, Sask., where her grandparents lived.

A few months later they moved to Saskatoon where her grandfather, a lawyer, had been appointed to the bench.

Mrs. Lang took an early interest in politics, working from the age of 14 at committee rooms during elections. Later she was an executive member of a university Liberal organization.

"I went to school for seven years in Saskatoon and one year at St. Joseph's Convent in Rosetown. After that I spent four years at the Academy of Sion in Saskatoon and then a year taking general arts at the University of Western Ontario in London.

"But I went home the following year — actually I flunked out now I come to think of it. I didn't study. Western is a great fun university."

After taking a business course, Mrs. Lang went to study at the University of Saskatchewan where she met her husband, then the university's 31-year-old dean of law.

WHIRLWIND COURTSHIP

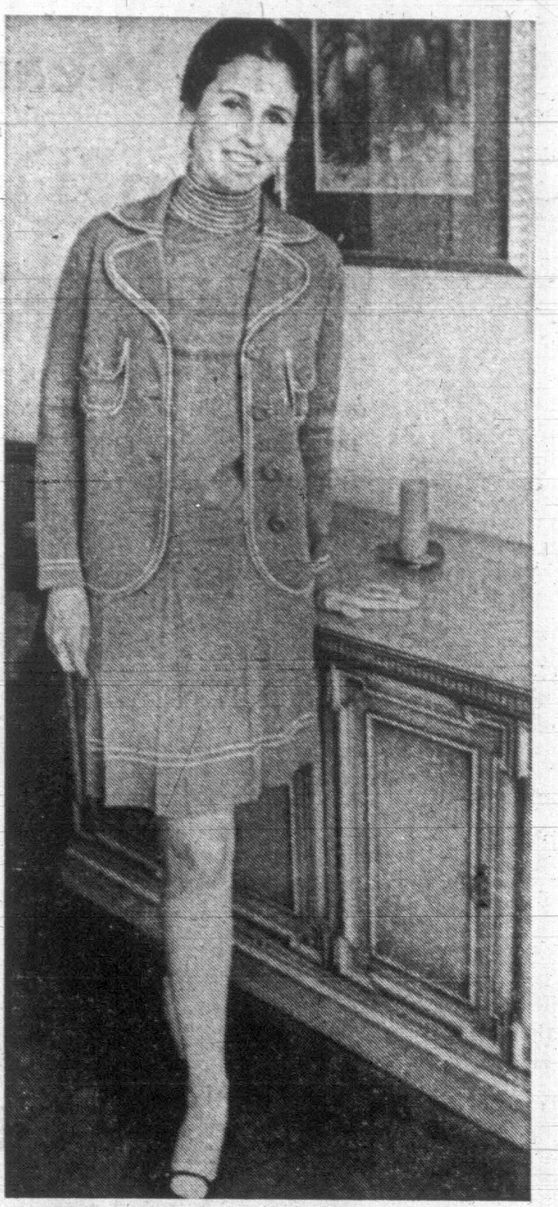
"I met him at a Canadian Union of Students' convention for the betterment of student-faculty relations," she said with a laugh. "After three weeks we became engaged—it was rather a whirlwind.

"It set Saskatoon on its ear. It intrigued everybody that the dean of law would marry a student.

"Nine months and six days after we were married we had our daughter. And every year thereafter we've had a baby," she said, grinning. "They're adorable children—just marvellous."

The Langs' children are Maria, 3; Timothy, 2; Gregory, 1, and Andrew, four months.

"I said to somebody recently that my husband would probably look up some afternoon in the House of Commons and see us all sitting up in the gallery. I can think of nothing I'd like better than to spend an afternoon there."



Mrs. Otto Lang is shown standing in the lounge of an Ottawa house. The Langs, who have four children, plan to rent their home in Saskatoon and move to Ottawa in the fall. (CP photo.)

Local Fashion Show Season Begins With Trio of Events on Wednesday

By PAT DUFOUR

Victoria opened its fall fashion show season in grand style Wednesday evening. The city was treated to three presentations, one at the nurses' residence of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, another at Holyrood House, and the remaining one at the Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

The show at RJH's nurses' residence was sponsored by the Alumnae Association of the Royal Jubilee Hospital's School of Nursing. The main lounge was crowded to capacity and the sum of $200 was realized. This will be used for the alumnae's student loan and bursary funds.

Win Sinclair of Miss Frith's Millinery and Fashions Limited was the commentator, describing the creations shown by his firm as an exciting preview of fashions to be seen on city streets this fall.

The emphasis was on luxury, especially noticeable in the new coats. Most of these were lavishly trimmed with fur. Typical of the new trend was a French creation of fine black wool that had white mink cuddling the collar, cuffs, front opening and bottom hem

This generous treatment of front opening and hems appears to be a favorite of fall fashion. Occasionally the front opening had its fur inside for extra luxury. This was never more attractively shown than in a taupe wool coat designed by Montreal couturier. Natural beaver was the choice of fur.

Leather is BIG NEWS this fall, whether it be the genuine expensive product or an eye-deceiving synthetic.

As is to be expected, leather has invaded the sports wear field in earnest. One of the most exciting outfits at Wednesday's show was of white aerpel, which looks so much like leather you have to read the tag to learn the truth. From Italy, this outfit teamed a saucy pair of slacks with a Nehru jacket that was in this season's longer length, and had a zipper front opening militarily bright with gilt trim.

Leather trims will be seen everywhere this fall and winter. Several outfits featured texture interest by teaming leather with a looped wool, a combination which drew applause from those that attended the show.

Evening and after-five clothes stressed the elegant. The local firm had bypassed the couturiers' promotion of see-through garments which latest releases from Europe and New York had warned us to expect. Instead, the clothes relied on feminine shaping and touches of the unexpected. A delightful example of this was an after-five dress of black moire, demure in front, with a full swinging skirt, and three slender strings of rhinestones to dazzle the baring back.

Chic as a coquette was a minidress of red and black plaid taffeta. High-necked and long-sleeved, it had a deep double ruffle at the bottom.

Capes, we've been warned, are going to be style stars this season.

Victoria will have plenty to choose from if last night's show is any indication.

One that drew enthusiastic response was part of an Italian outfit in double-knit wool, always a favorite on the West Coast. In camel shade to match the accompanying sheath, it opened to reveal a provocative lining in navy, white, red and camel stripes.

From the time the show was officially opened by Miss Elizabeth Maude Moore, director of education at the school of nursing, the pace was fast, melodiously set by accompanist Verla Close.

Presenting the fashions were models Pam Middleton, Mrs. R. G. Eldridge, Mrs. T. D. Campbell, Mrs. J. Owens, Mrs. F. W. Benton, Miss L. Gunning and Miss G. McFie.

Mrs. V. G. Skinner was the convener and Mrs. T. D. Campbell arranged the flowers which transformed the lounge into a temporary garden.

Mrs. R. B. H. Sewell was in charge of refreshments and Mrs. V. Wilson handled publicity. The hairstyles were by Maison Georges and makeup, Beauty Counsellor.

The Viking Orchestra will provide music, and country food will be served. Prizes will be awarded to the best-dressed "country folk" and the dance is open to members and friends.

PM Goes Stag To Ball

OTTAWA (CP) — A heavy rain failed to dampen spirits Wednesday night as dozens of new MPs and their wives proudly paraded to Rideau Hall for the first social big event of the parliamentary season—a glittering ball.

Pierre Elliott Trudeau came stag and delighted the ladies by dancing with as many as he could before the formal affair ended at 1:30 a.m.

The bachelor prime minister's partner in one fast number was Mrs. Roland Michener, the hostess, who wore a pale blue gown of satin duchesse.

The Micheners held what was described by a Government House spokesman as the first ball to be held on the eve of a parliamentary opening. Usually a dinner and reception is given by the Governor-General.

There were about 550 guests, including Robert L. Stanfield and his wife Mary, John Diefenbaker and his wife Olive.

DEAR ABBY . . .

A Nice Woman, but She's Not 'Mama'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My mother died two years ago, and my father got married again last May. He married a very nice woman and I like her a whole lot, but Abby, I just can't call her "Mamma." I have tried, but when I do it makes me feel so bad I have to go away somewhere and cry alone. I loved my own mother so much, no one will ever be able to take her place. I have three younger brothers, and when I hear them call Daddy's new wife "Mamma," it hurts me so bad inside.

I don't have anything against this lady, but I just can't call her "Mamma." What should I do?

SAD 12-YEAR-OLD

DEAR TWELVE: Your Daddy's new wife doesn't expect you to love her as you did your own mother, nor does she want you to "hurt inside." So don't make comparisons, and don't feel guilty if you can't call her "Mamma." This woman has come into your home to make your Daddy happy and to help him raise his children. She must be a wonderful woman. Give her a chance.

DEAR ABBY: After a long, unhappy marriage which ended in divorce, I married a widower. He is a very successful small town merchant who is very much admired in his community and church. We are very happy, but here is my problem:

I find that my husband pockets a part of each day's cash sales to avoid paying so much income tax.

How serious an offense is this, and what can happen to him if he is caught? I dare not ask anyone but you. Please answer in the paper and tell me what to do. I love him.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: This is a very serious offense, and if caught, he can be fined and sent to prison. So if you love this crook, tell him to keep his dukes out of the cash register.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's sister, Marcella, and I have been very close for years, so naturally, when Marcella became engaged, I expected her to ask me to be a bridesmaid at her wedding. You can imagine how hurt I was when she passed me by and asked her fiance's two sisters who both live out of town. I wouldn't have minded so much but she had never met either one of them.

As it turned out, one of the girls cannot make the wedding, so now Marcella has asked me to be a bridesmaid. I have been so hurt by this that I don't know what to do. Can you advise me?

SECOND CHOICE

DEAR SECOND: If it would give you pleasure to be Marcella's bridesmaid, accept. You would gain nothing by turning her down just to show your "hurt."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BORED AND BLUE:" The best cure I know for boredom and the blues is to turn one's attention to those who have "real" troubles. Get interested in hospital volunteer work, or crippled children, or mental health, or the disadvantaged. Just listening to someone else's problems can be the best medicine in the world for both of you.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

(An advertisement of considerable importance to women)
First new tampon in years brings peace of mind to its user.
Johnson & Johnson pioneers a new concept in sanitary protection—CAREFREE* Tampons
(MONTREAL J & J) Of course, tampons have been around for a long time but no real improvements have been made in them for some 20 years.
Now, Johnson & Johnson introduces its new CAREFREE Tampon. It's an entirely new kind of tampon—much smaller than any tampon ever made, yet amazingly, it offers longer lasting protection—up to 3 hours longer.
Another remarkable feature of CAREFREE Tampon is that it is truly disposable. No more rigid cardboard tube: there's just a neat, compact tampon in a cellophane wrapper.
What are other women doing about sanitary protection?
According to research studies conducted in Canada, the use of tampons is growing rapidly. Their use is widely accepted, particularly among the younger, more sophisticated women. In this group, the majority of women use tampons.
Most women think that tampons are indeed a good idea. But they worry about the reliability of present products, particularly when it comes to using them during the entire period. (Some women are so concerned that they use both tampons and napkins) but such precautions are completely unnecessary with new CAREFREE Tampon.
Safe up to 3 hours longer
Now, Johnson & Johnson has developed CAREFREE, the most absorbent, the most reliable tampon ever made. CAREFREE is, in fact, safe for up to 3 hours longer than any other tampon.
This greater absorbency results from a unique quality. While the traditional tampon expands lengthwise, the CAREFREE Tampon expands, logically enough, in width—as the flow requires. This gentle expansion causes the tampon to mould itself to the body contours so it's accident-proof.
Complete assurance
Exhaustive clinical tests and actual use among 3,720 women have proven that CAREFREE Tampons can be worn, with complete assurance, even during days when the flow is heaviest.
And the CAREFREE Tampon is made of pure surgical rayon. This type of rayon was developed by Johnson & Johnson and only Johnson & Johnson uses it. It has a high crimp and its long fibers interlock. This results in higher absorbency. And the tampon holds its shape, too!
New CAREFREE Tampons are truly disposable
The cumbersome applicator that you get with ordinary tampons is a thing of the past. CAREFREE doesn't have an applicator because it doesn't need one. It is compact, smooth and firm enough to be inserted easily without one. And this makes CAREFREE a truly disposable tampon.
CAREFREE is also the smallest tampon there is—so small you can hide one in the palm of your hand. So small you can put a box in your most fashionable bag and still have room for all that you usually carry. (A whole box of CAREFREE Tampons takes up no more room than a small pack of cigarettes.)
Once they've tried CAREFREE Tampons women are quick to recognize their many great advantages. They're the only significant improvement in sanitary protection in years.
Free trial
We'll send you—free—a package of 10 new CAREFREE Tampons in a plain envelope, addressed to you personally. Write to Anne Gilbert, Personal Products Division, Johnson & Johnson, 2155 Pie IX Blvd., Montreal 4, Que., and state whether you wish the Super or Regular absorbency. One offer only per person.
We'll also send you a factual and detailed leaflet on this happy innovation.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Mother Misses Lost Pastry Cloth

By PENNY SAVER

A few weeks ago my mother gave me a shopping challenge that I never expected to meet. She asked me to find her an old-fashioned pastry cloth. She hoarded her old one from as far back as I can remember, folding it with care; washing it when necessary, doing everything she could to preserve it. But one day it disappeared. She looked for another for weeks before recruiting me for the search and I quickly found that her statement was correct. If there were any pastry cloths to be found in the city, they were hiding themselves well. Mother, meanwhile, was miserable. She finds substitutes undesirable. The pastry would stick to a board or to waxed paper no matter how thoroughly she floured the surface. Her whole pastry-making operation was geared to a pastry cloth and she found it impossible to switch.

As I said, it was weeks before I found what she wanted, but I did find it. The cloth I found was more than a pastry cloth; it was a pastry frame. The $4.75 package contained a pre-shrunk pastry cloth of durable canvas, wooden and steel bars to hold it rigid while the pastry is being rolled and a knitted rolling pin cover. The cloth itself must be more than 18 inches square, because on one edge there was a red rule that started at zero and went up in inches to 18. With this it is possible to measure a crust's diameter almost exactly. If this wasn't enough, the surface of the cloth was marked with two circles, one eight inches in diameter; the other, nine. The label includes instructions for assembly, storage and washing, as well as a bonus—step-by-step, illustrated instructions on how to make pastry. These pastry frames are just the thing for the bride-to-be.

Perfect Egg Wedges Every Time

I have always envied the woman who could make perfect egg slices for her salad dishes. Whenever I have tried to slice an egg artistically it always managed to slip out of my fingers and end up on the floor or some other unsavory place. I have always suspected that there was some special machine designed to make perfectly wedged eggs, but until the other day I couldn't find one. An egg slicer is $1.49 I learn. This machine will turn a round, hard-boiled egg (peeled of course) into six attractive wedges. The device is shaped like a pair of tongs with a spring at the junction. On one arm is a ring larger than the average edge with a cross-hatching of wires to do the slicing. The other arm ends in a small plastic cup to hold the egg. To slice, just squish the arms together.

Separating eggs is another area where I don't shine. I have never managed the art of clean, shard-free breaking of the shell and usually manage to send at least one yolk into the carefully collected whites. If I am especially lucky, the yolk won't break, but it almost always does. I have this problem solved, however, since I bought an egg separator. This is an old-fashioned device, now made in plastic. A central cup holds the yolk while the whites drain through the bottom. The whole separator is just the right size to fit over a cup. Available in several shades, these are 29 cents apiece.

If you would like to know where I shopped, please call me at 382-3131.

Home-Sewers Should Use Dash of Daring

Dear Eunice Farmer:

I love to sew and consider myself quite professional when it comes to the finished product, yet I seem to lack the courage necessary to make anything unusual. As I look through my wardrobe, there isn't one thing in my closet that wouldn't look great on my mother. This isn't exactly the way I want to look at my age. — Mrs. J. W.

Dear Mrs. J. W.:

Your letter reminded me of a friend of mine who was asking my advice about a new pattern she was considering. The bodice was in a contrasting color, and the collar and front edges were bound in the contrasting color of the skirt. She told me she liked the pattern, but thought she would make it all in one color and perhaps add a contrasting collar. She was thinking of the practical part of the garment, which undoubtedly was going to take away the joy and thrill of making her original pattern.

Clothes are a means of expression and leading authorities agree that they can greatly influence your state of mind and well being. Be free; make something unusual; be courageous, and I'll personally guarantee it will brighten your entire life. In this day and age, we must think young and know that nothing is forever; we must be willing to change our ideas and not form a set pattern.

Today, we don't expect one dress to cover every occasion. This was a necessity during the depression days, and many women are still in the same rut. We have clothes for at-home wear, sports, evening clothes, etc. This is the reason women have run back to the sewing machine again. Please try one project that has a little more daring than you've ever had before and let me know if I'm right!

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Importance of Exercise Becomes World-Known

Lowman

The importance of exercise is zeroing in from all over the world. This information is the result of many studies and much research. It is becoming more apparent every day that regular exercise is one of the preventive measures we can use against hardening of the arteries.

It seems that we are likely to be as young, and no younger, than our arteries. When these are clogged and narrowed like rusty pipes, the stage is set for heart attacks and strokes. We must depend on these "pipes" to carry essential food and oxygen to all parts of the body and to remove waste materials.

Vigorous exercise dilates the capillaries and increases the number of blood vessels in the heart and muscles. It steps up the flow of blood to the muscles and to all organs. It is also thought to decrease fatty liquids in the blood.

The great heart specialist, Dr. Paul Dudley White, has said that at least an hour of rapid walking, or similar exercise, is essential for best health. A 3½ or four-mile walk, jogging or swimming or golf, any exercise which uses the leg muscles and speeds circulation are helpful.

Jogging has become extremely popular in the United States. As an example, there are around 20,000 people in organized jogging programs in the metropolitan area of Baltimore alone. Many other cities and towns have similarly enthusiastic jogging groups.

As in any exercise program, everyone should have a physical checkup first. It is important to have the supervision of a physician when engaged in a jogging program. Jogging every other day is often recommended. The beginner usually jogs for a few yards and then walks for a few.

Jogging doesn't cost anything, you can do it on any level surface, it is fun in a group. You need no special equipment, just a pair of tennis shoes and slacks or shorts and a sweater or tee shirt, depending on the weather.

You can even jog at home! You can jog around the house. I call the following exercise "Horizontal Jogging." It uses the leg muscles in a similar manner and, as you will find out, it stirs up circulation with vigor.

Get down on the floor on your hands and knees. Straighten your legs out behind you. Elbows are straight and your body weight is supported by your hands and toes. In this position take a step forward with your left foot, bending your left knee, right leg is still extended. Now, with a jump, straighten your left leg and bend your right knee. One leg bends as the other straightens with each jump.

Sometimes you need to do exercises for two or three areas of your figure. In that case, you need Josephine Lowman's free leaflet, "Combination Exercises." To receive your copy send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

First Signs Of Opposition To Sewer Plan

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Saanich council took its campaign for the sewerage enterprise into the field Wednesday night — and ran into the first signs of opposition.

Site of the meeting was Cloverdale elementary school—in the heart of Sewer Area No. 1, biggest of the six separate sewerage areas, which serves seven-tenths of all sewered properties in Saanich.

The first two meetings were held in the municipal hall to which persons were invited who have complained about lack of sewers and filthy ditches. Close to 100 persons attended those meetings and were strongly in favor of the enterprise proposal which will go before ratepayers in a referendum Sept. 28.

COMMON UTILITY

The enterprise proposal, in brief, would consolidate the existing separately-financed sewerage areas into a common utility and define an additional area of 3,400 acres of adjacent land to which sewers can be expected to be extended in the coming five years.

There would be a common annual debt charge of $22.14, a common annual maintenance charge of $7 for those connected to sewers and an annual rebate to sewered areas of $8.70, the reduction to last as long as the area has been paying for sewers.

In the case of Sewer Area No. 1, which includes the Gorge and High Quadra, the rebate would last 16 years. Existing charges in this area begin at $27 a year (debt plus maintenance) and run as high as $137 in other sewered areas of Saanich.

Seventy-five persons attended Wednesday nights meeting and several questioners indicated, in their preamble and in their questions, reservations and objections to the proposal although one man made a strong plea to set aside quibbling over a few extra dollars in costs.

Former Saanich reeve and councillor, Joe Casey, set the stage when he was told that everyone in Saanich voted on the Gorge-High Quadra sewers and that subsequent sewerage areas were by local improvement and local votes by persons who knew the cost of the work.

OBJECTIONS

Mr. Casey said he objected to residents in Sewer Area No. 1 paying for people in Cadboro Bay and Gordon Head.

Mayor Curtis, who lives in Gordon Head which is Sewer Area No. 2, replied that residents of one area are not "bailing out" others.

"Infectious hepatitis and other diseases don't give a damn about boundaries and it doesn't matter if you live in No. 1, No. 2 or No. X, if you don't have sewers you're in trouble," he said.

Mr. Casey said residents in the No. 1 area are being imposed on and he recalled that when he was on council he helped sell the public on this vote 17 years ago.

Mayor Curtis replied that debt commitment will not end when the payments would normally be finished in 1981.

(Earlier, comptroller-treasurer John Tribe said "no one is ever going to be debt-free of sewers" and that Saanich will be assessed costs for regional trunk line and outfall work. Council felt the enterprise proposal was a fair way of paying, on an equal charge for equal service basis.)

MADE CONTRACT

Mr. Casey said he made a contract with the people in Sewer Area No. 1 at the time.

"What are your alternatives," asked Mayor Curtis.

"Local improvement," said Mr. Casey.

(This has been the basis of recent sewerage expansions with affected property owners approving of the costs and with the knowledge of the cost. The last such extension, to a small area of Gordon Head, is costing $130 a year for residents in debt charges.)

Mr. Life said that under the enterprise proposal, all sewerage costs—trunks, sub-trunks, laterals, pumps, outfalls, treatment plants if ruled necessary by provincial authorities—will be paid by the enterprise on an equal per-parcel basis.

Later in the meeting, Ald. Leslie Passmore—a veteran member of council and contemporary of Mr. Casey—pointed out he is the only council member who lives in Sewer Area No. 1 and he supported the enterprise referendum.

'FAIR' CHARGE

He said the common charge of $22.14 a year is a fair one and Sewer Area No. 1 residents will get a rebate of $8.70 a year for 16 years.

"No one is saying the figure will stay at $13.44," he said. "You will get an increase but you would get an increase anyway."

(It was indicated, as long as one year ago, that costs of rebuilt outfalls, trunk lines, subtrunks and laterals would add $31 a year to the common annual charge. Cost of a treatment plant would be extra.)

He said comments by provincial cabinet ministers made it clear that sewage treatment plants will be required before effluent goes into the sea, rather than the present system of dumping it in a raw state.

The cost of one treatment plant at Macaulay Point, which would serve Esquimalt, part of Victoria and part of Saanich, is more than $3 million, he said.

One questioner asked what assurance there is that sewers will be extended in the five year period.

Mr. Life said he is confident the work can be done, barring a catastrophe. Mr. Tribe said if it doesn't happen, he was sure the common charge would be discontinued for unsewered areas.

In answer to another question, Mr. Life said the Blenkinsop Valley can be sewered but the design will be based on the outcome of considerations after the planner makes a report on the 1,300-acre valley area before next spring.

One questioner said residents outside both the sewered and the to-be-sewered areas could sway the vote while having no financial interest in the outcome because they won't pay annual costs.

Mr. Tribe said 80 to 85 per cent of Saanich residents live in the affected areas, leaving only a small number in rural parts.

He was also asked what a 30-suite apartment will pay under the proposal.

The questioner was told that each parcel of property will pay the common debt charge but an apartment building would pay the maintenance charge of $7 a year for every suite.

Thus the owner of a 30-suite apartment would pay $210 a year in maintenance.

There was also provision in the bylaw that if income from maintenance charges exceeds the need, the surplus can be used against debt charges among enterprise users.

Irish Lottery Tickets Seized

EDMONTON (CP) — Irish sweepstake tickets worth $250,000 were seized Wednesday after a raid on an apartment block and a private home.

John Godfrey Norrington, 64, of Edmonton, was arrested and was to appear in court today charged with transmitting and disposing of lottery tickets.

FOLLOWING six hectic years as United States ambassador to Canada, Husky Walt Butterworth flew out of Ottawa Tuesday to retirement in Princeton, N.J. Mr. Butterworth had the same difficulties as those encountered by his predecessor Livingston Merchant in trying to get Canada to accept American nuclear weapons. So rancourous did relations become that the U.S. state department accused the Canadian government of not pulling its weight for North American defence.

Experimental School Opens Doors Monday

An experiment in liberal education will begin in Victoria Monday with the opening of the Victoria Free School.

Thirty-three student and three full-time teachers will hold their first class then in a church hall at 520 Niagara.

The school is born only a month after first public discussions began. Essentially it is a protest movement against the traditional school system which free school supporters claim is strangled by outmoded regulations.

Most of the students are high school dropouts, said teacher David Cox. In their new setting they will study, debate and relax as they choose.

Tuition fees will range from $30 to $50 a month.

Mr. Cox graduated from Uvic this year. Other teachers are UBC graduate John Simpson and Ezra Auerbach, an undergraduate from San Francisco.

Tom Paul, another Uvic graduate, will teach part time and several local professors have offered to conduct seminars.

Under the free school format, teachers and students will be equal in everything but knowledge.

The population July 1, 1967, was 20,441,000 after an increase of 1.9 per cent in the previous year.

Counts were higher for the 1967-68 period in all provinces. Ontario recorded the largest total gain, adding 154,000 to make its population 7,321,000, British Columbia passed the 2,000,000 mark.

The new population clock at DBS headquarters, geared to the rates of birth, immigration, emigration and death that prevailed on July 1, had clicked over to register 20,839,152 Canadians by mid-afternoon Wednesday.

Recreation Bylaw Vote On Oct. 26

DUNCAN — The joint recreation commissions of the area are "primed and ready to go" to sell the $850,000 bylaw for a covered swimming pool and community centre at Pioneer Park, Duncan.

Chairman of the joint commissions Mel Massey made his statement Wednesday evening after the Cowichan Valley Regional District agreed on Saturday, Oct. 26, as voting day.

Electors in Duncan, the south end of North Cowichan and the unorganized areas of Cowichan Bay, Cobble Hill, and Cowichan Bay-Koksilah-Eagle Heights will vote. It needs 60 per cent in favor to carry the bylaw.

Mr. Massey said both municipal councils have approved promotional budgets and the theme of the commissions' appeal to the public will be "target '69."

He said the $850,000 would cover the total cost including landscaping and fictures.

Mr. Massey said consultants A. B. Sanderson Ltd. estimated an operating deficit of $20,000 a year.

He said there would be no tariff for use of the facilities by people from outside the voting district but a straight across the board charge.

Addressing the regional board before it set the Oct. 26 date, Mr. Massey warned that $850,000 cost estimate was liable to upward revision after April 1 next year.

GIVEN CHANCE

Mr. Massey said, "If you set an early date and the recreation commissions are given a chance to sell the project you will have the first successful recreation bylaw vote of the Cowichan Valley Regional District."

A discordant note was struck by commissioner Dave Laverock of the non-participating area of Shawnigan Lake.

He said he understood Vancouver bond dealers had recently told Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell they would turn "thumbs down" on financing regional districts.

Commissioner Herb Halliday had asked if the provincial government would guarantee regional district debentures.

Commissioner Alex Smith said if what Mr. Laverock said was true the board should disband as they would just be sitting around twiddling their thumbs.

However, commissioner John Cannon said, "It is up to the mininster to promote his baby (the regional districts) or else we can all go home."

Interim secretary Gordon Berry said he would find out for the next meeting whether or not the government will guarantee their debentures.

Ready, With or Without Pay

ALERT BAY (CP) — It is typical of Chief William Scow, British Columbia's most recently appointed Indian magistrate, to accept a responsibility without asking about payment.

Mr. Scow is hereditary chief of the Kwiksuktanek-speaking people of the Kwakjutl tribe—a non-paying job.

He was appointed a judge of family and children's court in this community off the northeast coast of Vancouver Island last December.

"I really don't know if they are paying me or not," Mr. Scow said.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's office said Mr. Scow will be paid either a salary or a stipend, but his salary has not yet been decided by the department.

Mr. Scow is chairman of the B.C. Indian Advisory Board, also "a non-paying job," he said with a grin.

Mr. Scow has not yet sat on the bench because the two senior magistrates in Alert Bay appear able to handle the work.

"But I have my magistrate's handbook handy and feel I am ready any time," he said.

Law is becoming a family tradition in the chief's household. His eldest son, Alf, a lawyer, is currently serving on an international commission in Guyana for the Canadian government.

Region to Get Mesachie Village

DUNCAN — The company village of Mesachie Lake, now housing a deserted sawmill, will likely be taken over as a responsibility of the new Cowichan Valley Regional District.

Hillcrest Lumber Company secretary John Coleman said Wednesday, "I think there will be no problem in keeping the area populated.

"A great deal of interest is being manifested already in the houses we are offering for sale and I don't think there's any question of the regional district having a dead area on its hands."

Hillcrest Lumber is in the final stages of closing down its operation because of the unavailability of timber.

Mr. Coleman said the company would hand over to the special services district assets including the village water system, sewer system, fire department, a community hall, inter-denominational church, playground and baseball field.

He said there would perhaps be a nominal charge of a $1.

Mr. Coleman said Hillcrest Lumber would become the principal landlord until such time as it could sell its houses and land.

He said, "As the lumber company is nearly finished we do not wish to become involved in real estate except to sell it.

"Some 95 per cent of the land area at Mesachie Lake is owned by the company and it is intended to develop some real estate in the way of a subdivision but not much."

Mr. Coleman said there has been a continuing program of replacement of the wooden stave pipe in the water system and this would not be a great cost factor in any takeover.

He also said there would be public access to both Mesachie and Bear Lakes.

75 HOUSES

Mr. Coleman said there is a total of 75 houses in the village with 17 of them privately owned.

Regional commissioner Herb Halliday in reply to a question said Lake Cowichan Village Commission had rejected as impractical the suggestion it could expand its public works department to take care of the Mesachie services.

Chairman Ald. George Whittaker said the regional district's letters patent were recently amended to allow them to handle just this kind of situation.

He appointed Mr. Halliday and commissioners Allan Anderson and Jim Hunt to negotiate with the Hillcrest Company on the details of the takeover.

Interim secretary Gordon Berry said that all costs in the new defined special services area of Mesachie Lake would be against the taxpayers of that area.

Rites Saturday For Mechanic

The Royal Canadian Legion will conduct funeral services at Colwood Saturday for Frank Korner, 61, holder of the OBE from the Second World War.

Mr. Korner was found Monday in the front seat of his car on the Port Renfrew Road near Shawnigan Lake. His car, parked off the side of the road, was found by a passing motorist who informed RCMP.

The attending officer found him dead. He was alone in his car.

Call Off Search

GOLD RIVER — Dragging of Muchalet Lake near here was called off Tuesday after an unsuccessful four-day search for the body of pilot Brian Sylvester, 33, of Richmond.

Police said naval divers participating in the search found no trace of the pilot, whose light plane went down in the lake more than a week ago.

Sylvester, son of Victoria Flying Services president William Sylvester.

WILDCAT STRIKE OVER

LADYSMITH — A wildcat strike at Ladysmith Forest Products Ltd. sawmill here ended Wednesday as suddenly as it began.

The afternoon shift turned up for work and the mill resumed normal operation.

Men walked off the job Tuesday morning in protest against the hiring of an outsider to run the mill's debarker machine.

They claimed someone from within the mill could have done the job equally well.

Company, union and Forest Industrial Relations (bargaining agents for the employers) were expected to meet in Vancouver today.

Mill manager Joseph Frumento said, "Discussions will probably centre on future training plans within the company."

About 80 men were involved in the dispute.

Ambulance Decision Delayed

DUNCAN — A bylaw vote to spend $30,000 to house the Kiwanis ambulances will be delayed at least a month.

This was the result of a Cowichan Valley Regional District meeting when ambulance society president George Sinden asked the board to consider a $9,000 addition to accommodate a civil defence truck.

Mr. Sinden said he was concerned at the idea of the ambulance vote being delayed until after the major recreation bylaw vote Oct. 26 but had been asked to bring up the question of housing the CD vehicle.

Ald. James Saunders, Duncan, said he would hate to see the ambulance bylaw killed because of adding 25 to 50 per cent to the total cost.

Commissioner H. A. Warner said they should proceed with the original bylaw and leave the question of additions until later.

Mr. Sinden said the CD truck is presently kept in the open at Cowichan District Hospital and unless it was housed shortly the provincial government would recall it to Victoria.

He said; "if that happens we'll never get it back to this district where it has been extremely helpful in times of flood and other emergencies."

The CD truck is part of a portable hospital unit.

Commissioner Ken McKinnon said that as such a small amount of money was involved he did not think it would jeopardize the success of the bylaw.

A decision was referred to committee.

Appeal Court Considers Coroner's Jurisdiction

A coroner's court is a criminal court and witnesses can be compelled to testify at an inquest as they can at a trial, it was argued in British Columbia Appeal Court here Wednesday.

George Murray, representing the coroner of Langley and the B.C. attorney-general, held that Gary Frederick Whitelaw of Vancouver could be compelled by law to give evidence at an inquest in Langley.

Mr. Whitelaw was the driver of a car involved in a fatal accident at Langley last September in which five-year-old Brian Wilson was killed.

He applied for release from having to give evidence, questioning the Coroner's Act of British Columbia, and was supported by Mr. Justice J. Munroe.

Mr. Murray appealed Mr. Justice Munroe's ruling.

Chief Justice H. W. Davey and four other judges of the B.C. Appeal Court, reserved their judgment Wednesday afternoon following two days of argument.

WRITTEN JUDGEMENTS

It is expected their written judgments will be handed down in Vancouver law courts.

The appeal against Mr. Justice Munroe's ruling was opposed by Vancouver lawyer W. H. Deverell. It was he who asked that Mr. Whitelaw should be excused from giving evidence at the inquest into the death of Brian Wilson.

Mr. Deverell recalled that, in the case of Batary versus the attorney-general of Saskatchewan, 1966, the Supreme Court of Canada held that a person accused of murder and awaiting trial could not be compelled to testify at an inquest into the death of a person with whose death he was charged.

"The Supreme Court held that any provincial legislation to the contrary effect was ultra vires," Mr. Deverell said.

ACT EXAMINED

Mr. Justice Munroe, he added, found that Section 5 of the Evidence Act did not specify who should be compelled to take the witness stand at an inquest.

It only dealt with the rights and obligations of a witness already on the witness stand, Mr. Deverell argued.

"I submit that a person should not have to testify at an inquest if there is a possibility he may be charged later in a criminal court."

Mr. Murray argued that Mr. Whitelaw should not have tried to avoid testifying at the inquest.

"He should have taken the stand and then refused to answer questions under protection of the Canada Evidence Act," Mr. Murray said.

Counsel said section 129 of the British North America Act reserves jurisdiction relating to coroner's courts to provincial governments until such time as the Prliament of Canada passes legislation to the contrary.

"Parliament has not seen fit to occupy that field," Mr. Murray said. "Consequently the Coroners' Act of British Columbia is valid and unchallenged."

The appeal was heard by Chief Justice H. W. Davey, Mr. Justice E. B. Bull, Mr. Justice Angelo Branca, Mr. Justice M. M. McFarlane and Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz.

Rugged Show In Old Days

Jury duty was tough in the old days.

In the Court of Appeal Wednesday, W. H. Deverall quoted an old English statute in reference to men and women called for jury duty.

The statute said:

"Jurors can have neither meat, drink nor fire until they have returned a verdict."

Emergency Care Award Presented

A Victoria ambulance man has earned a graduate certificate from the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons at Portland.

Derek Chow received the certificate upon completion of an advanced course in emergncy care and transportation of sick and injurd persons.

Mr. Chow is employed by Victoria Ambulance Service Ltd., and is a member of St. John Ambulance Brigade.

The boy and his half brothers Wayne Byron, 14, and Kerry Byron, 11, had apparently been examining the rifle which discharged as Wayne returned it to its place on the kitchen wall of the house

The bullet grazed the head of the Brooks youngster and he fell to the floor but did not lose consciousness.

Vietnam Film To Be Shown

An American documentary film on Vietnam by David Shoenbrun will be presented by Victoria Voice of Women at the new provincial museum, Belleville and Government, Tuesday at 8 p.m.

"In this film, Mr. Shoenbrun discusses American involvement in Vietnam as well as the problems and prospects of withdrawal," says Mrs. Mavis De Girolamo, president of Victoria Voice of Women.

"As Canada is concerned with the American war effort through sales of arms and war material, we feel every Canadian businessman will want to see this film and make his own decision about Canada's role."

Mrs. De Girolamo says the VOW will make this film available to interested local groups.

Brothers Leave Gift of Bursaries

The seven Christian Brothers of Ireland, teachers at St. Louis College when it was forced to close this spring, are quietly distributing a final gift to their students.

They are dividing the proceeds from the sale of their residence into bursaries for former St. Louis students.

Between 10 and 15 boys will benefit up to $1,000 from the parting gift.

The 104-year-old college, second oldest school in B.C., had to close in June for lack of money. The teaching order had provided staff for the past 54 years.

"We figured these were the only assets we had in Victoria," one of the teachers, Brother F. R. Foran, said from Vancouver today.

"And we thought it would be nice to do something for the students so this is what we did,"

The brothers lived at 959 Balmoral in a house owned by the order. The brother provincial in the Toronto headquarters approved the gift as did the St. Andrew's Cathedral Board which administered the college.

"They were an example to our sons," Mrs. Beatrice Stuart, former president of the school's Parent-Teacher Organization, said of the brothers today.

Strike Hobbles Italian Ships

ROME (AP) — Maritime unions Wednesday began a four-day staggered strike that hobbled Italian liners in four Italian ports as well as in Spain, South Africa and the United States.

Ships immediately affected by the strike were the Galileo and Victoria at Las Palmas; Marconi at Durban, South Africa; Michelangelo and Colombo in New York, and six more liners in Italian ports.

The 12,000 maritime workers involved in the strike are seeking a contract from shipping companies that will assure them promotions and better working conditions aboard.

WAS OFF LIMITS

Sidney Koon's council seat was declared vacant when an Arvada, Colo., judge ruled that Koon's house is 1.1 feet north of the town limits.

Brothers Accused Of 'Passing Buck'

NDP Leader Robert Strachan accused Education Minister Donald Brothers Wednesday of "passing the buck" to Premier Bennett.

He derided a reply by Mr. Brothers to a Coquitlam School Board request for departmental permission to buy land for new schools to end the shift-system imposed on 3,600 children this month in the district.

Mr. Brothers was reported as saying he would discuss the request with Premier and Finance Minister Bennett, when he returns from an overseas trip.

"Mr. Brothers is just stalling and evading his responsibilities," said Mr. Strachan.

He said Mr. Brothers was in the legislature last session when both Mr. Bennett and former education minister Leslie Peterson repeatedly assured the House "specifically that there was no school freeze in Coquitlam when (MLA) David Barrett raised the prospect of shifts for lack of classrooms."

With that assurance in mind, Mr. Strachan said there was no need for further delay in order to consult with the Premier.

"Why doesn't he just tell them (Coquitlam trustees) to go ahead and buy the land? After all, he's the minister responsible, not Mr. Bennett," said Mr. Strachan.

West German Leader Gets Three Years

HANOVER (AP) — Adolf von Thadden, leader of West Germany's right National Democratic party, Wednesday drew a suspended one-month jail sentence for drunken driving.

A Hannover court also fined him $566 payable to the Federation Against Alcohol in Road Traffic. In addition, the party leader had his driver's licence suspended for three months.

Von Thadden drove his car into a building-site fence March 3. He admitted to having tried some South African brandy before he climbed into his car.

"Due to 30 years of accident-free driving" by Von Thadden, Judge Jan-Wolfgang Berlit decided to suspend the jail sentence and place Von Thadden on probation for three years.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Here is another slam hand from the Minneapolis-Montreal match at the Summer Nationals. Both South Players chose to open with one diamond. There is no need to use a forcing bid with this type of two suiter. Someone is sure to keep the bidding alive.

The one spade response by North is normal and East has a takeout double of sorts. Not one to be proud of, but one he should make.

Each South player made the strong rebid of a jump to three clubs and each North rebid his spades to three.

Both Souths continued to four clubs and then came the parting of the ways. The Montreal North bid four diamonds. South went on to game and North passed.

Jerry Lee of Minneapolis made the winning bid of five diamonds. He did not have much of a hand but he did hold three good diamonds and a singleton club. It was apparent to him that his partner held a real minor two suit hand and it called for a stronger bid than a mere preference.

This made it easy for Eddie Langer to go on to the slam. It was also an easy hand to play since both trumps and clubs broke. Eddie did not know this and studied the hand for several minutes after ruffing the second heart.

Finally he came up with what appears to be the best line of attack. He led a diamond to dummy's king to guard against finding all three diamonds with East. He could not cope with all three diamonds in the West hand except by a first round finesse.

When both opponents followed to the first diamond he led a club to his ace; ruffed a club, ruffed a spade back to his hand and ruffed his last low club. If that had been overruffed he would have gone down but he could not handle five clubs in one hand under those conditions. No one overruffed and the sun shone happily on Minneapolis.

The lawyers were entertained by Hon. Brian Lenahan, Ireland's minister of justice, at Dublin Castle, and by the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland at the Four Courts and King's Inns.

UNOPPOSED

Lamoureux Back As Speaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Lucien Lamoureux was re-elected Speaker of the Commons today as Canada's 28th Parliament opened in a mood of easy-going friendliness.

The Independent member for Stormont-Dundas was saluted from all sides of the House as he was ushered to the Speaker's chair by Prime Minister Trudeau and Opposition Leader Stanfield.

Leaders of all three opposition parties praised Mr. Lamoureux but called for change in the method of his appointment.

Mr. Trudeau, with a large orange flower in his lapel, opened the session by nominating Mr. Lamoureux. He said the Speaker's position as an independent would improve the work of the House.

Mr. Stanfield, in seconding the nomination, praised Mr. Lamoureux's tact and diplomacy but called for early consideration of a method of choosing a Speaker that would be free of "partisan considerations."

Mr. Lamoureux, a bilingual 48-year-old lawyer from Cornwall, was elected as a Liberal MP in 1962 and was elected Speaker in 1966.

In the June 25 election he ran as an independent in Stormont-Dundas and was opposed only by an NDP candidate.

Mr. Stanfield noted that his own party had not opposed Mr. Lamoureux in the interests of having a non-partisan Speaker.

But he said the electors of the constituency should not be forgotten.

David Lewis, NDP parliamentary leader, also said that no constituency should be "deprived of an election contest."

Mr. Lamoureux, apparently emphasizing his independence, sat in a back-row seat on the opposition side of the chamber during the election process.

TYPICAL OF HIM

Mr. Lewis said his selection of a seat was typical of Mr. Lamoureux's sense of propriety and humor.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said Mr. Lamoureux's qualifications for Speaker were indisputable. But his party had wanted to see Mr. Lamoureux become permanent Speaker.

Speaker Lamoureux said the Commons had honored him, his family and his constituency.

He said he will endeavor to be worthy of the trust placed in him by the Commons "whose servant I am."

Before the Speaker's election, the members of the new Commons went through the traditional ritual of proceeding to the Senate chamber to be asked by Chief Justice Cartwright, as deputy to the Governor-General, to elect a Speaker.

The MPs—almost 100 of them newcomers—gathered under the blaze of television lights in the Commons chamber in a relaxed and convivial atmosphere. Television is permitted in the chamber at Parliament's opening.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker joked and chatted with a succession of old political enemies, including Transport Minister Hellyer and Robert Thompson, former Social Credit leader who now is a Conservative member.

Mr. Stanfield called on Mr. Trudeau at the prime minister's invitation for about 15 minutes before the Commons sat to elect a Speaker.

TEXT OF SPEECH FROM THRONE DELIVERED TODAY IN OTTAWA

OTTAWA (CP) — Text of speech from the throne read by Governor-General Michener at opening of Parliament Thursday.

Honorable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

I have the honor to welcome you to the first session of the 28th Parliament of Canada.

Across the land there are great expectations of what this Parliament will produce. My ministers recognize the responsibility for leadership which these hopes entail.

They are determined to do all that they can to carry out the mandate they received from the people of Canada in the recent general election.

They recognize their duty to ensure that the wishes of Canadians concerning their government be fulfilled as quickly and as completely as the general advantage will allow.

At the same time my government is conscious that aspirations and their realization have to be tempered by a sober awareness of reality.

Take Time

In the complexities of modern society, effective programs take time to develop and more time to implement.

At all stages they require financial and intellectual resources which are not unlimited and must be used with careful planning and the hard judgment of priorities.

It is a simple fact of life that everything cannot be done at once.

My government has planned the legislative program of this first session in the context of a Parliament of normal duration

To Set Priorities

To make way for the consideration in later sessions of new programs that Ministers are already developing, it is proposed, during the current session, to elucidate priorities and to set in motion new policies.

Of equal importance, though of far less drama, Parliament will be asked to deal with a host of matters essential to the smooth and up-to-date functioning of government which were not disposed of in the previous Parliament.

My government considers that its first responsibility, and the first responsibility of this Parliament, is to clear the accumulation of essential legislative adjustments, improvements and modernizations left over from the last Parliament.

Unless they are cleared up promptly, efficient public administration and the effective operation of the Canadian economy and society will be hampered.

Criticizes Rules

My ministers believe that much of the delay and difficulty in the handling of parliamentary business during recent years could have been avoided or reduced by the improvement of parliamentary rules and procedures.

It is their view that Canadians feel that Parliament is too far removed from the people it serves; its operations are too slow and ponderous; its deliberations are often insufficiently informed and its decisions are too few and too much delayed.

In order that parliamentary institutions may retain the confidence of the people, and in order that they may cope successfully with the vast scope and complexity of government today, it is essential that provision be made for legislative machinery that can act speedily on the large number of varied, detailed and complicated legislative, financial and policy questions that will be the normal, and indeed the growing parliamentary program of the future.

Poverty Remains

. . . Poverty continues to exist in Canada. My government recognizes that, but it also believes that it would be deluding and cruel to pretend that there is a simple, all-encompassing or instantaneously effective remedy.

Poverty can be dealt with successfully and permanently only by continued and determined action in a variety of ways by all governments.

For its part, Parliament can be assured that the federal government will contribute fully and assume leadership wherever it can properly do so.

To this end, the proposals you will have for your consideration will include the establishment of a department charged with the objective of ensuring that people in all areas and regions of our country have as equal access as possible to the opportunities of Canada's economic development.

Other Elements Vital

At the same time, there are other and broader elements vital to a just society, and my ministers feel that these must receive, at this and in later sessions of Parliament, a degree of attention they have not had hitherto.

Toward these ends, you will be asked to enact important changes in the criminal law, to provide new protections for consumers and investors, to update food, drug and health legislation, to revise or amend legislation relating to the machinery of justice, and to correct a number of particular injustices, including those resulting from certain provisions of the Inustrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act.

Expect Reports

During the course of the present session it is anticipated that the government will receive reports from inquiries with regard to labor legislation and veterans pensions, and it is the intention of my ministers to bring their proposals in these matters before you as soon as possible.

My government believes that the objective of a just society must always include the pursuit of a prosperous economy as well as the fair distribution of its proceeds.

Just as we have in the past tended, perhaps, to consider justice in our society largely in material terms, so we must recognize that there has been a tendency in Parliament and to some degree in government to concentrate on the distributive aspects of our economy.

In this course we have sometimes tended to neglect those aspects that can affect the productivity of our country, and hence the total provision of economic well-being for our society, and its competitiveness in the changing conditions of the modern world.

The natural resources of Canada and the industries based upon them continue to be of immense importance to our economy but the advantages of our great physical resources by themselves are no longer an adequate base for a growing and prosperous modern economy.

Even Terms

We shall increasingly have to compete on even terms with those countries of the world which are most advanced technologically in the provision of the sophisticated products of modern life.

Unless Canada can maintain an economy that is efficient, competitive and productive in relation to the most advanced nations on earth, we cannot have the basis for a society from which poverty has been eliminated, we cannot maintain high levels of employment and income and we cannot ensure the standard of life to which Canadians generally aspire.

It is against this background, as well as with the consciousness that the interests of all must be fairly balanced, that the government is approaching its policies and programs of an economic character.

In this same context, Parliament will be asked during the present session to consider proposals for a systematic and continuous review of prices and costs in our economy.

Just as incomes cannot increase faster than productivity if price increases are to be restrained, so government spending by all levels of government cannot increase faster than productivity if we wish to restrain the increase in levels of taxation.

These two realities are among the most important that Canadians and their leaders must bear in mind during the months and years ahead. Measures that you will have to consider relating to the Kennedy Round reflect the outcome of a major international effort to reduce the barriers to international trade and emphasize the opportunities opening up for a great trading nation like Canada.

A measure to be brought before you dealing with the amendment of the Bretton Woods arrangements, results from comparable efforts to stabilize and improve the whole international financial system.

Chooses Carefully

Conscious of the limitations it must place on its expenditures, my government has acted within the framework of previously announced guidelines to select carefully the programs which in the light of regional needs and opportunities it considers most promising for the promotion of a prosperous economy.

My ministers will bring before you legislation relating to the encouragement of manpower programs, regional improvements, domestic investment, export development, and resource administration, including a Yukon mineral act and an oil and gas production act relating to Canada's increasingly important northern resources. In addition, my government will propose a freshwater fish marketing act, and intends to investigate immediately a number of methods for promoting greater efficiency in the production and marketing of grains, including the establishment of a national grains council.

You will be asked to approve amendments to the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Farm Credit Act, the Farm Machinery Syndicates Act, the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act, and the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act.

Sees New Importance

You will be asked to consider a Canada development corporation act, a federal cooperatives act and an export development corporation act.

The growth of our population and the changes in the nature of our mobile urban and industrial society lend a new importance to conservation in its traditional sense.

We have taken and are taking effective strides toward economic conservation through progressively better use of our resources to achieve a high and long-term productivity.

We must also give new attention before it is too late to the preservation of our natural heritage for the enjoyment of Canadians of future generations.

National Parks

You will be asked to consider measures concerning national parks and historic sites and monuments.

These and other facilities for the repose of the mind and restoration of the spirit, for sport, and for physical relaxation are and will be of increasing importance to our social environment.

They offer Canadians and to visitors to Canada the possibility of a quality of life richly satisfying and ever more difficult to come by in this and in other industrial countries.

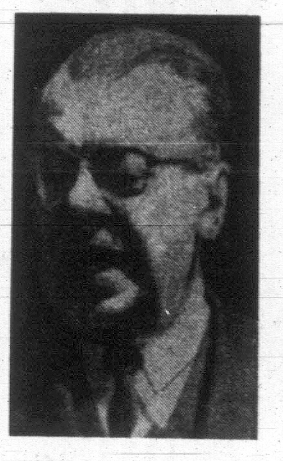
Of broader importance is the problem of pollution, which must receive increased attention from federal, provincial and municipal governments.

My ministers are actively engaged in preparing proposals on these subjects and in due course, these will be brought before you for your examination.

A Reminder

The natural riches with which Canada is blessed must serve to remind us that we have a substantial responsibility and a great opportunity in matters of foreign aid.

My government intends to press forward its plans and programs for international cooperation and development which include the establishment in Canada of an international development centre.



SWORN in today as government leader in the Senate was Paul Martin, former external affairs minister and unsuccessful candidate for the Liberal leadership.

International Affairs

In international affairs generally, my ministers regard the current situation as uncertain and deeply disturbing. Talks are under way in Paris concerning Vietnam but so far negotiations have not advanced as we had hoped they might.

The government has followed with anxiety the attempts to promote a peaceful settlement in Nigeria and has participated actively in international efforts to relieve the sufferings of the civilian population.

The situation in Czechoslovakia has also caused the gravest concern to the government, not only for its effects on the prospects of detente and future evolution within Communist countries, but also for its consequences for the freedom and well-being of the Czechoslovak people. For those of them who have to seek refuge in other countries, my ministers have already taken steps to offer permanent homes in Canada.

The government has undertaken and is pursuing a thorough review of our external and defence policies. Canada's contribution to NATO, relations with Peking, with Latin America and with Europe are being studied currently.

Reviews of our relations with other areas will be undertaken later and, as conclusions are reached, Parliament will be invited to consider them.

Many Advantages

The events in other lands to which I have referred are a vivid reminder that our good fortune as Canadians includes rights and freedoms as well as material advantages.

They alert us to the need, not only for vigilance in the conservation of our democratic institutions, but also to the importance of constant concern for their improvement.

Efficient government, responnsive to public requirements and open to public participation, is essential to the meaningful operation of the democratic process.

It will be the more vital in the future as technology and science provide new and more immediate means for the dissemination of information and for the involvement, as individuals, of all our people.

The government has already taken steps to review its information services in order to introduce, as soon as possible, improvements by which the flow of information into and out of the government will be more efficient and effective, permitting the people of Canada a continuing, informed, and more active participation in the activities of their government.

In addition, as part of the continuing process of modernization and development of governmental machinery, you will be asked during the current session to enact a government organization act. This measure will complete a number of changes in organization and structure announced by the Prime Minister some weeks ago and will complement the parliamentary reforms so fundamental to the successful operation of our democratic institutions.

The reinforcement and renovation of parliamentary and administrative machinery and the clearing away of the substantial backlog now outstanding in the legislative program, will free Parliament so that it can come to grips with difficult and pressing problems relating to youth, poverty, regional disparities, urban growth, individual welfare, and the application and encouragement of scientific technology.

Concern All

These subjects are of concern to all governments in Canada and it is clear that a great deal more has to be done than has so far been contemplated.

It would be wrong, however, to expect solutions to be found easily or indeed to be found to at all except on the basis of close co-operation in good faith between federal, provincial and municipal governments not only in planning but in implementation as well.

To assist in this process it would be useful to have available to all governments an institute where long-term research and thinking can be carried out into governmental matters of all kinds.

At the present time there is no such facility available in this country and it is the intention of my Ministers to bring before you in the near future legislation that will fill this most important gap in our governmental apparatus.

Members of the House of Commons:

During the current session you will be asked to appropriate the funds required for the services and payments authorized by Parliament. In addition to this business, the legislative program that the government proposes is very extensive but many of the items have been seen before or are of an uncontroversial nature.

A list of the bills relating to the matters to which I have referred will be tabled by the prime minister later this day and other portions of the program will be brought forward as the session proceeds.

It is very important to the proper government of the country in the years ahead that the proposals for the current session be dealt with.

In Canada as in other countries of the world democracy today faces a decisive challenge. It must adapt to new circumstances and new demands or fail in its purpose. This challenge is not abstract but a confrontation which you will have to face by virtue of your election to this Parliament.

Honorable members of the Senate,

Members of the House of Commons,

May Divine Providence guide you in your deliberations.

Teaching Renovation Needed in Medicine

By DON ANGUS

HALIFAX (CP) — Dalhousie University's centennial medical conference turned to genetics today after an opening session Wednesday on education and practice.

Doctors from North America, Great Britain and Europe are attending the conference which marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of Dalhousie's medical faculty.

Wednesday, Dr. Ralph W. Tyler, retired director of the centre for advanced studies in the behavioral sciences at Stanford University, California, offered ground rules for renovation of teaching concepts in medical schools.

Dr. Tyler urged medical faculties to treat students as junior colleagues, to set professional goals and evaluate progress in the attainment of these goals rather than grading on regurgitation of textbook information.

During a panel discussion, Dr. Donald I. Rice, executive director of the Canadian College of Family Physicians in Toronto, said no co-ordinated program exists to meet Canada's future health care needs.

" . . . we desperately need a clear course of action that will ensure an effective integration of the combined forces necessary to ensure quality health care in the future."

Dr. Rice predicted that the chronic shortage of physicians in rural areas will continue and the individual doctor will disappear. He will be replaced by regional medical centres visited on a regular basis by family physicians, he said.

In the cities, individual physicians will be replaced by group practices.

Border Arrests Made Following Drug Sale

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — State police and federal narcotics agents arrested two Montrealers and two New York City men in northeastern New York state Wednesday in connection with the alleged sale of heroin worth nearly $1 million on the illicit market.

The Montrealers, Claude J. Bourdeau, 30, and Thomas Pytel, 44, were arrested by the federal agents at Champlain, near the Quebec border. State police impounded $73,000 in cash.

The men were in separate cars, headed north.

About an hour later, state police arrested Bartelomio J. Dalli and Stanley D. Simmons, 38, of New York City, in a car on the Adirondack Northway near Chestertown in Warren County. Police said they seized five kilos of heroin.

All four were held in Clinton County jail to await counsel, prior to arraignment before U.S. Commissioner Joseph Kelly.

Bourdeau and Pytel were held in $100,000 bail each and the other two in $50,000 each.

Labor Gov't Charged With Finger Poking

LONDON (CP) — Socialist ministerial meddling in Britain's nationalized industries comes in for a rough mauling from a Commons committee in a report released Wednesday.

Labor government cabinet members "have done largely the opposite of what Parliament intended" by poking their fingers into management instead of laying down policies, the all-party committee concludes after a two-year study.

The report undoubtedly will have a best-seller impact among the proliferation of officials in the socialized industries despite its stratospheric price of £6, two shillings and sixpence ($15.92) per copy.

REQUIRED READING

It also will be required reading for some ministers who would see their powers eroded severely if it were implemented.

For it calls for an entirely new relationship between the government and the mammoth complexes of government-controlled industry if this side of the Socialist experiment is to succeed.

The main recommendation is that a single super-minister should be put on top of the whole commercial setup—railways, steel, coal, electricity, gas and airlines—instead of having control scattered around among a miscellany of ministers.

First reaction among political observers is that a shuffle of such far-reaching consequence is highly unlikely, if only for the reason that it would meet hostility from a large segment of the ministry yielding power. First editorial reaction also is distinctly hostile.

"Has a Soviet ring to it," comments The Evening Standard.

PLENTY TO CRITICIZE

However, the Commons committee found plenty to criticize in the present setup whereby the industries are under such departments as transport, power, trade, Scottish affairs and the postmaster-general.

Under its proposal, the ministry of power would virtually disappear.

The report says that under the existing setup there has been confusion, weakness and bitterness between heads of state-owned corporations and ministers and their departments.

The report is sure to touch off skirmishes in the Commons. There could be ructions within the cabinet should Prime Minister Wilson decide to act on it. But a number of ministry mergers are believed planned for autumn anyway, and these should give Wilson enough to handle in one bite.

Council To Retain Autonomy

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet has decided that the Medical Research Council will retain the autonomy it had before a controversial cabinet order this summer made the council part of the federal health department, a reliable source said today.

The original order approved in July resulted in widespread concern in the scientific community that the Council's system of awarding research and other grants would be limited.

Following a series of private negotiations, the cabinet has agreed that the Council will continue as before, except that it will report to Health Minister Munro.

Until July, the Council reported to the chairman of the cabinet's committee on scientific and industrial research. The chairman was Treasury Board President Drury, at that time industry minister.

EXPRESSED FEARS

When the cabinet shifted the council into the health department, scientific groups expressed fears that the change would open the door to government financial controls over the $27,400,000-a-year grants program of the council.

The council awards the money on the basis of recommendations of assessment committees made up of senior scientists in universities and research institutions.

The council was originally set up as a virtually autonomous agent of Parliament to administer funds voted by Parliament. The votes were made to t ,disoj2ouncil with a specific amount earmarked for the Medical Research Council.

The medical council functions separately from NRC except for administrative services supplied to it by NRC,

Annual Cleanup Of Freighter To Employ 70

Between 70 and 80 laborers and machinists will find four days' employment next week when the Norwegian freighter Britta docks at Esquimalt Graving dock.

The 700-foot Britta, built in 1967, will be brought in Tuesday for her annual cleaning and painting.

Bill Maddock, yard manager at Yarrows Ltd., said today about 50 men will be hired to complete the work crew.

The Britta has a 102-foot beam, nine holds and a deadweight of 46,850 tons.

The wrecked Mandoil II, currently in the drydock, will be moved out Sunday to make way for the other vessel.

Mandoil leaves about Sept. 25 for Taiwan, where she will be cut up for scrap.

Welsh Singers To Give Sample At Welcome

The 90-man Pendyrus choir from Wales is expected to give a sample of its talent outside the Legislative Buildings Friday at 5 p.m. when it is welcomed to Victoria by Public works Minister W. N. Chant.

The ceremony will be held inside the new provincial museum in the event of rain.

The choir of workingmen from Rhondda Valley will be dinner guests of the B.C. government in the Douglas Cafeteria prior to a concert in Memorial arena at 8:30 p.m., arranged by the RCAF 800 wing as part of Battle Of Britain Week observances.

Labor Must Aid War on Poverty

VANCOUVER (CP) — The trade union movement must actively participate in the fight to relieve poverty in Canada and around the world, T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party said Wednesday.

"We must raise our sights and actively participate in the struggle of common people in this country and around the world," he told the western Canadian convention of the International Woodworkers of America.

"Half the human race lives on a per capita income of $150 a year," he said. "How long do you think they will live in peace if this continues?

"When people go hungry and see their children go hungry they go out and grab what they can no matter if some of them get killed."

He said Canada should lower its trade barriers to underdeveloped nations participate in more foreign aid programs and ask trade unionsists to teach their skills abroad. He also hit poverty in Canada and urged the trade union movement to press for "a just system of taxation."

PAY HIGH TAXES

The NDP leader, a candidate in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands federal by-election, said the Carter Report on Taxation "tells us very frankly that the middle and low income groups are paying inordinately high taxes."

He told delegates they must recognize the role of the trade union movement is changing.

Before, they bargained with the boss; today they bargain with consortiums backed up by researchers and computers, he said.

"You must extend your activity far beyond collection bargaining and think in political terms. Today one single act of the legislature can take away hard-won gains of the last 25 years."

Exploded Before Crash

NICE, France (Reuters) — An Air France Caravelle jetliner lost Wednesday with 95 persons aboard on a flight from Corsica exploded while trying to crash land in the Mediterranean, it was indicated today.

Rescuers so far have recovered 17 bodies at a spot 12 miles south of here.

All hope was abandoned of finding survivors from the plane's 89 passengers and six crew members.

PM's REPRIMAND GETS MIXED U.K. ATTENTION

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's sharp criticism of the operations of a so-called French agent in Manitoba received prominent display in some national newspapers in Britain today but others gave it scant attention.

The mass-circulation Daily Mirror gave the Ottawa story a four-column spread on its back page with the headline: "France accused in storm over 'agitator.'"

The Daily Sketch also gave the story back-page attention but The Times buried the report in just two paragraphs on page five. The Guardian also gave the report two paragraphs, tucked away in the lower left-hand corner of the front page.

However both BBC and commercial television networks brought the report about the stirring up of the language issue in Manitoba into their national evening news summaries.

There was no immediate editorial reaction.

French Gov't Declines Comment

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government duly noted Prime Minister Trudeau's accusation that France sent an agent to agitate among French-speaking Canadians in Manitoba but will not make any comment at this stage, officials said today.

Premier Maurice Couve de Murville and Foreign Minister Michel Debre, attending a Gaullist parliamentary conference in La Baule, south-west France, were informed of the Canadian protest, they said.

"I take note of the Canadian prime minister's observation, but I would not wish to comment on them now," Debre told reporters in La Baule.

Trudeau accused the French government of "underhand and surreptitious" tactics in the activities of a French civil servant in Manitoba.

Philippe Rossillon, head of France's High Committee for the Defence and Expansion of the French Language, spent two weeks in Manitoba last month encouraging French-speaking people in efforts to safeguard their language.

This committee, created last year by then premier Georges Pompidou, is administratively attached to the French premier's office.

But officials here said that Rossillon went to Canada on a private visit at the invitation of a French-language cultural group in Manitoba.

Rossillon was not immediately available for comment.

Pueblo Captain Admits Spying, Koreans Claim

TOKYO (AP) North Korea said that the captain of the United States intelligence-gathering ship Pueblo admitted to foreign correspondents today that his vessel was "deep" inside North Korean waters when it was captured Jan. 23.

The North Korean Central news agency said Capt. Lloyd M. Bucher told the visiting correspondents the Pueblo has "full technical equipment for espionage activities and intruded several times in the territorial waters of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to commit espionage activities."

It said Bucher made the remarks in answer to questions put to him during a news conference held for foreign reporters in North Korea for the Communist regime's 20th anniversary celebration. It was the first time any of the U.S. crew had been questioned by foreign correspondents.

Twenty of the Pueblo's 81 other crew members appeared with Bucher at the news conference, the North Koreans said.

Bucher is reported to have said the ship's crew confessed to their "grave crimes" and asked the North Koreans to "pardon them and deal with them leniently."

A letter sent to President Johnson in March, which the North Koreans said was signed by Bucher and his crew, also admitted that the Pueblo was in North Korean waters when it was captured and listed five geographic points at which it said the vessel had trespassed.

North Korea has said it will release the 81 Americans if the U.S. government admits the Pueblo violated North Korean waters and pledges to refrain from such intrusions. U.S. officials say they do not believe the ship crossed into North Korean waters and have proposed an investigation by a neutral party.

SHIP RAMS WAREHOUSE, $150,000 IN DAMAGE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Damage was estimated at $150,000 to a cold storage warehouse rammed Wednesday by the Alaska cruise ship Glacier Queen, attempting to dock in Vancouver harbor.

The ship escaped with little damage.

Capt. William McCombe blamed mechanical failure, saying he rang an order to reverse engines but it wasn't followed.

None of the 120 passengers or crew members was injured as the ship's bow rammed the building, scattering piles of frozen fish.

Long-Range Program Outlined

THOUSANDS MARCH on Parliament Hill in Ottawa today demanding that English as well as French be used in Quebec schools. St. Leonard Catholic School board in Montreal area proposes to phase out English.

OTTAWA (CP)-Highlights in the speech from the throne at Thursday's opening of the 28th Parliament:

Improved rules of Parliament to be sought to speed up "slow and ponderous" legislative machinery.

Major Issues To Follow Heavy Backlog

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trudeau government said today it is deeply committed to creation of a just society but warned that the goal cannot be accomplished overnight.

In the Speech from the Throne read by Governor-General Michener at the opening of the 28th Parliament, the government set out a list of "backlog" measures it hopes to pass this session.

As Prime Minister Trudeau had forecast, the speech contained little new or surprising.

But it did include a preview of long-range aims.

Removal of the substantial legislative backlog, it said, will free Parliament so that it can come to grips with difficult and pressing problems relating to youth, poverty, regional disparities, urban growth, individual welfare, and the application and encouragement of scientific technology."

The speech did not make clear whether measures on these problems will be brought down in the current session.

But it said the government has planned its program for the session "in the context of a Parliament of normal duration."

Solutions to these problems can only be achieved on the basis of co-operation with provincial and municipalities, the speech said.

See Complete Text Page 37

In this connection it revived a proposal by former prime minister Pearson for an institute to carry on "long-term research and thinking" into govenmental matters of all kinds.

The speech did not say that such an institute would be set up, however, but only that it would be "useful to have one available" to all governments.

The 3,000-word speech, read in alternating English and French to senators and MPs assembled in the Senate chamber, said there are great expectations across Canada of what the 28th Parliament will produce.

Step by Step Method Stressed

But it cautioned:

"It is a simple fact of life that everything cannot be done at once."

The speech sketched plans for legislation on a number of matters left over from the last Parliament or promised during the June election campaign.

They included reform of the Criminal Code, an official languages bill, review of prices and costs, consumer protection, manpower programs and a regional development department.

The speech also touched on individual freedoms and efforts to combat poverty but cautioned that there is no instant remedy for poverty.

It said:

"My government is deeply concerned to provide and to ensure increased justice, dignity and recognition to the individual, particularly in an age which is characterized by large governments, industrial automation, social regimentation and old-fashioned laws."

A great deal had been accomplished in recent years to make Canadian society more just in terms of income distribution and security, but poverty continued to exist.

"My government recognizes that, but it also believes it would be deluding and cruel to pretend that there is a simple, all-encompassing or instantaneously effective remedy."

Poverty could only be dealt with through determined action by all governments, but the federal government would take the lead wherever it could properly do so through the regional development department.

Other measures relating to a just society would include the Criminal Code amendments, new protections for consumers and investors, up-to-date food, drug and health legislation, changes in the machinery of justice and removal of injustices involving labor.

The last item referred to revival of a controversial bill to change the structure of the Canada Labor Relations Board and insert in labor law a reference to regional bargaining units.

The throne speech also laid heavy stress on productivity, saying Canada could not have the basis of a poverty-free society unless it maintained an efficient, competitive and productive economy.

It was in this context that proposals would be introduced for a "systematic and continuous review of prices and costs in our economy."

The government itself was carefully selecting programs it considered best for promotion of a prosperous economy.

Grain Strike Pact Agreed

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor and management negotiators for 1,300 striking Lakehead grain handlers and their 10 employers hammered out a settlement in tough, night-long bargaining early today at the insistence of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey.

Mr. Mackasey announced the settlement at 5:50 a.m., EDT after apparently going over the heads of management negotiators to deal directly with company presidents by long-distance telephone.

Union negotiators said they would recommend unanimous ratification at a meeting at the Lakehead this weekend.

The settlement calls for wage increases of 45 cents retroactive to last Jan. 1 and 15 cents each half year starting next Jan. 1—a total of $1.05 spread over the three-year life of a new contract.

The union originally sought $1.06 spread over two years, and the companies' last offer was $1.00 over three years, with 75 cents of it to be paid in two years.

A company spokesman said the settlement amounted to a 45.6 per cent increase over three years.

Other unsettled issues in the strike are to be submitted voluntarily to an arbitration board appointed by the companies, the unions and the labor minister.

SETTLEMENT LARGE

The grain handlers' hourly average wage has been $2.50. Mr. Mackasey noted that the increases in the settlement are weighted heavily "on the near side," and said it was a large settlement in relation to others that have been negotiated recently.

"But in these particular circumstances it was necessary for the grain handlers to catch up. The union has been frozen into a three-year contract while other workers have been getting increases in the past two years."

Czech Resignation

BELGRADE (Reuters) — The official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported today that Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek of Czechoslovakia has resigned.

The Cryptic Returns!

"Heav'n has no rage like love to hatred turn'd,
Nor Hell a fury, like a woman scorn'd."

Seventeenth century playwright William Congreve should be living today to experience the rage and fury of Times' Cryptic Crossword Puzzle fans deprived of their thrice-weekly diet of cerebral entertainment.

Monday's Times, minus the Cryptic, was barely off the press before our switchboard started lighting up like a Christmas tree with anxious calls. The situation eased off Tuesday, a non-puzzle day; but when Wednesday's Times came out, again with the Cryptic, the barrage resumed in earnest.

Under the circumstances there is only one thing to do—admit we goofed and put the Cryptic Crossword back. It will appear again Friday in its accustomed place on the comic page, and regularly Monday, Wednesday and Friday from now on so long as it is available.

An interesting question remains.

What is it about these puzzles which arouse such intense loyalty among the afficianados?

Here is a sampling of comments from Times' subscribers who called to protest the cancellation:

"The cleverest puzzle of its type I've every come across." "It provides hours of enjoyment, sometimes even days." "You really have to exercize your brain to solve this one." "The Cryptic is always a real challenge . . . the solutions are logical and intelligent." "I think it's a real education."

Could it be that Times' readers who haven't tried the Cryptic are missing something?.

English Rights Demanded

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands of Montreal parents and school children paraded quietly around Parliament Hill today demanding bilingual schools in Quebec.

The column of placard-carrying marchers grew steadily as busload after busload from Montreal unloaded protesters at the foot of the Hill.

The delegation, expected to number about 8,000, is protesting first moves in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard to make the language of school instruction French only.

Many of the delegation are recent immigrants from Europe who want their children to learn both English and French in their new homeland. Italian was the dominant language heard among the marchers.

The demonstration was timed to coincide with the opening of the 28th Parliament today. A similar demonstration is planned for Quebec City when the provincial legislature opens.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Montreal area cabinet ministers and MPs will meet the leaders of the demonstration.

Injury Halts Trek

LONDON (AP) — A British expedition attempting the first surface crossing of the Arctic Ocean headed back over the ice today with an injured team member. Radio messages said Geophysicist Allan Gill, 37, had fallen into a hole and injured his back.

Travelling in dog sleds, the four Britons were reported heading for their summer base camp about 170 miles from a drifting United States Navy research station. London sponsors of the expedition said the injured man probably would be evacuated by plane from the camp.

Hijack Suspect Faces Day in Court

MONTREAL (CP)—A six-foot Negro from Texas was to appear in court in suburban Dorval this afternoon to answer charges relating to an attempt Wednesday to hijack an Air Canada Viscount turboprop aircraft en route to Toronto from Saint John, N.B.

The man—who identified himself as Charles Lavern Beasley, 22, of Dallas—was held for questioning after RCMP and Air Canada officials assured him he would receive "asylum" and would be better of to remain in Canada instead of forcing the plane to go to Cuba.

As the police at Dorval prepared to lay charges, on the advice of the immigration department, United States authorities were also investigating the case.

The FBI said they had a warrant for the arrest of a man named Charles Lavern Beasley for a $14,000 August holdup of the Farmers and Merchants State Bank at Ladonia, Tex.

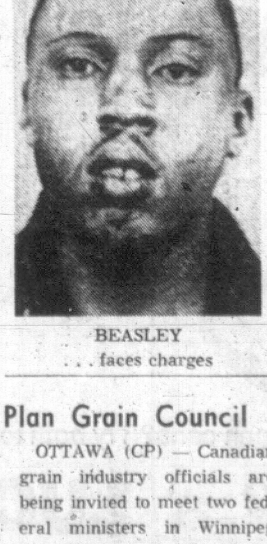
The man held here, who booked the flight in Halifax under the name of Garvey, made a statement that he was wanted by the Central Intelligence Agency of the U.S. because he was a member of the militant Black Power movement.

FIRST FOR AIRLINE

The mid-air drama, the first hijacking attempt in Air Canada's 31-year-history, began a few minutes after the plane took off from Saint John.

The man, holding a .22 Colt revolver at the head of a stewardess and pushing her before him into the aircraft's flight deck, ordered pilot Capt. Ronald Hollett of Toronto to change course.

But Capt. Hollett and first officer Robert Bromley of Ottawa convinced him the aircraft needed to be refuelled for a flight to Cuba and the man agreed to a stop in Montreal.



BEASLEY
. . . faces charges

After the refuelling was completed, the man appeared to change his mind about going to Cuba and he spoke with RCMP Assistant Commissioner Raoul Carriere over the radio.

The assistant commissioner said he spoke for about 20 minutes with the man, trying to persuade him to surrender.

PROMISES ASYLUM

He assured the hijacker—who held the plane's two-man crew at gun-point—that the Justice Department in Ottawa had promised to grant him asylum.

The man had also asked to speak with the Cuban consul-general in Montreal, but he was told the consul-general did not wish to come the airport to speak to him because the man was not a Cuban citizen.

Eventually, the man agreed to turn over his gun to the pilot and the assistant commissioner, accompanied by RCMP staff-sergeant Leo Liboiron, walked unarmed to the plane.

The man was then taken into custody.

Initial questioning was conducted exclusively by immigration officials, but Air Canada and suburban Dorval police joined the interrogation later.

The hijacking of the plane caused so little commotion that many passengers were unaware of anything unusual happening.

Stewardess Christine Waud, 23, of Notre Dame de Lourdes, Man., was the first to be warned by the gunman.

He pointed his revolver at her head and then made the second stewardess, Beverly Atkinson, 26, of Vancouver, walk ahead of him to the flight deck.

Shoal Harbor Control Aim of Ratepayers

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A campaign to prevent pollution of Tsehum harbor on the northern end of the Saanich Peninsula, has been launched by a ratepayers' association.

The eastern district, North Saanich Property Owners' Association, has requested government action to control the disposal of waste in the beautiful inlet, otherwise known as Shoal Harbor.

It urged strict controls and foreshore zoning regulations for marinas.

Control of the harbor should be under the jurisdiction of one body, it suggested.

The inlet's waterfront is shared by North Saanich and Sidney.

"It is obvious that a single body of water can not be divided by a line having Sidney regulations on one side of it and North Saanich regulations on the other, it pointed out in its brief.

The association also urged the government to reject the application of Albert Yuen for a foreshore lease to allow another marina in the basin.

MAKE TESTS

Pending a reply from the government, the group appointed Dr. William Newton, well known biologist, to make a coli test of the harbor's waters.

Major David A. Petrie, secretary, said the association was not opposed to marinas.

"It is one of the most suitable harbors on southern Vancouver Island for small boats," he said. "Our concern is the abuse of the inlet's waters.

"It is also obvious that there is a saturation point in the number of marinas that should be permitted in any one body of water," he added. "Where is it going to end if there are no controls?"

Tsehum harbor with a shoreline of about four miles, has become in the past few years, one of the largest anchorages for small boats on southern Vancouver Island.

It is a body of water with no fresh water streams flowing into it during the summer season, and depends on tidal action to flush out waste from hundreds of small craft.

Its northern and northwest beaches are mud flats. These are causing some concern to residents as there are indications that the mud is accumulating sewage.

The inlet has also several branches, each of which contribute to the pollution problem on the whole, according to the association.

A northern branch contains the Royal Victoria Yacht Club mooring facilities; a marina and yacht mooring station formerly known as Clark Brothers; and Westport Marina and Mooring station, formerly known as Randle's Landing.

Blue Heron basin, another branch, is occupied by the Capital City Yacht Club.

Shoal Harbor (the southwestern branch) within the boundaries of Sidney, contains two marinas, the Fisherman's wharf, and numerous mooring floats and anchorages. Resthaven Hospital is situated in this area.

White Paper, Baird Hold Different Views

Ald. Robert Baird said today that the outfall method of disposing of raw sewage has been outlawed in Britain.

He made the statement following an extended tour of England and Scotland.

Ald. Baird's statement is in conflict with a British Medical Research Council White Paper which, as recently as three weeks ago, re-stated its findings that outfalls were safe and did not consititute a health hazard if taken far enough and deep enough into the sea.

But Ald. Baird said that "being careful to choose those cities comparable in size and environment to Greater Victoria" he found engineers virtually unanimous in their condemnation of the raw sewage outfall method of disposal.

He said the cities where most useful facts were gathered were London, Coventry, Perth, Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen.

Kirkcaldy and Aberdeen are costal communities. Perth is situated on the Firth of Tay, 20 miles from the coast. Coventry is nine miles from the geographic centre of England. London is situated on the River Thames.

LOOK TO FUTURE

Ald. Baird stated in a prepared press release that two facts "were forcibly presented to me by engineers: raw sewage, after communition is still raw sewage no matter how far out to sea it is carried. The outfall method generally speaking is now outlawed in most of Great Britain and some communities have been given until 1971 by order of the purification boards, to clean up the problem.

"Two, the long view point of sewage disposal is to consider now the needs of future generations and plan accordingly."

Ald. Baird said it is obvious that Greater Victoria must fully investigate at least partial treatment before dumping sewage in the sea.

"Partial treatment allows only a harmless effluent to be deposited in the sea. Sludge is a product of a treatment plant and must be disposed of in some way. Sludge is usually composted or transported to a deep part of the ocean many miles away."

Ald. Baird adds that the cost of treatment must be considered and met "courageously if we desire an efficient and helthful system so necesssary to the community."

The British Medical Research Council published its White Paper, Memorandum 37, in 1960. In mid-August city engineer James Garnett wired the council to ascertain whether or not the findings, which gave deep sea outfalls a clean bill of health, were still valid eight yeart later.

The answer "findings still valid, repeat valid" was received two days later.

Salt Spring Chamber Backs Sewer Protest

Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce voted Wednesday night at Ganges to oppose any dumping of raw or partially treated sewage into the sea or any other public body of water.

The executive representing 119 members, voted overwhelmingly in favor of the resolution.

Chamber president Gavin Reynolds said a stand must be taken on the issue now.

"We are under pressure to do so since all the other Gulf Island chambers have made public their decision to oppose the dumping of sewage in the sea."

There was only one abstention.

A public meeting has been called for 8 p.m. Saturday of the Salt Spring Island Anti-Pollution Society to discuss the pollution Control Board's decision to allow the Malivien Estate to dump partially treated sewage in Trincomali Channel.

It has been rumored that there are 20 other developments in the Gulf Island coming up for similar applications.

NO TALKS SCHEDULED AT TAHSIS

A union official said today no talks were scheduled with the company in a dispute which has shut down the Tahsis pulp mill at Gold River.

The mill's gates were closed Wednesday after a dispute over working overtime to repair a pump developed Tuesday afternoon. About 325 employees are involved.

The company is calling the work stoppage an illegal strike while the union says mill workers were locked out.

No talks between the parties have been held or are scheduled, Orville Braaten, president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, said in Vancouver today.

Car Insurance Report Ready In 3 Weeks

Provincial Secretary Wesley Black today said he expected the royal commission report on automobile insurance will be made public in about two or three weeks.

The three-man commission headed by Mr. Justice Wootton spent almost two years studying all phases of auto insurance and the present system of civil suits to determine liability in accidents before turning in its report to the government this summer.

First Time Any Victorian Wins Club Award

John Robert Knox, a fourth-year anthropology student at the University of Victoria, has been awarded a Rotary International scholarship which will pay for a year at Cambridge University in England.

Donald Wagg, president of the Victoria Rotary Club, said it was the first time to his knowledge a Victoria resident had won the award.

Mr. Knox, who lives at 2670 Sea View, will attend Cambridge next fall.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me the real name of authoress Pearl S. Buck? The public library says that is her real name but some time ago I saw a formal picture of all the Nobel Prize winners and it gave her real name and in brackets Pearl S. Buck.—A.S.

A. The confusion in this case may stem from one of Pearl S. Buck's two marriages. According to the international Who's Who, Pearl S. Buck is in fact her real name. She was born in Hilisboro, West Virginia, of American missionaries. During her life she has been married twice, once to an unnamed teacher at Nanking University, and in 1935 to one Richard J. Walsh (died 1960). The name given outside the brackets may have been one of the married names.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps on antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Island Parks Being Closed By Vandalism

By JOHN SLINGER

Vandalism, substantially checked by new provincial parks regulations, is still a major problem in private and municipally-operated parks on the Island.

At least two parks have been forced to close and picnic and recreation facilities have been removed from a third because of excessive damage.

But imposition of a $1 entrance fee and increased supervision at B.C. parks has "cut down a tremendous amount" on vandalism, Harold McWilliams, provincial parks branch director said today.

The problem arises every summer, but this summer has brought considerably fewer reports of wilful damage, he said.

The new fee system, begun in early June, was expected to raise $250,000 this summer. The money was to be used to provide extra maintenance and control in 50 of the 94 provincial roadside parks and campsites.

●

At Nanaimo, the Chamber of Commerce has given up maintaining the Mount Benson lookout and park, chamber president Vic Jones said.

Vandals have torn down lookout guardrails and knocked over cement-based picnic tables and washrooms every year since the park was opened four years ago, he said.

Earlier this summer, fires were started and the vandals were burning some of the debris they produced.

Maintenance became too expensive for the chamber, he said.

On Salt Spring Island, the road up to the 1,800-foot park and lookout on Mount Maxwell has been closed because vandals have bulled over concrete-based guardrails and, in some cases, pushed them over the cliff.

It leaves the lookout dangerous to sightseers.

At Comox, picnic tables and benches have been removed early from the waterfront Port Augusta park and village clerk Eileen Trimble said much of the equipment might not be salvageable.

●

Vandals have also badly damaged a footbridge over a creek in the park, she said.

Mr. McWilliams said most of the damage is attributable to teen-age parties on Friday and Saturday nights.

At Nanaimo, beer bottles were found strewn around Mt. Benson park after damage sessions, Mr. Jones said.

Miss Trimble said the Comox park "is a great place for young people to go down and park on a Saturday night."

In Victoria, parks superintendent Herb Warren said the problem this year is not appreciably different from other years.

He said vandanism has regular peak periods—in spring, when the beather begins to improve; just prior to school opening at the end of summer and before Halloween.

However, cautioned Harry Wipper, Nanaimo's parks superintendent, most young people co-operate with the authorities.

●

"It only takes one or two to make it look bad for everybody," he said. "I'd like to report that, generally, we're very pleased."

At Island RCMP headquarters, a spokesman said "no great upsurge of vandalism" has been reported this summer. He said "it is to be deplored, of course . . . but apparently there isn't a great deal of it."

$1 Million Apartment At Mt. Tolmie

An apartment project costing at least $1 million is planned for the western side of Mount Tolmie in Saanich.

It would consist of 94 suites — one, two and three-bedroom — and would be located at the northeast corner of Richmond Road and Mayfair Drive.

The rezoning application by Ken Oliver is expected to come before Saanich council Monday night when it will probably be forwarded to a public hearing later this month or in October.

The development would be in two buildings. The zoning being sought is for medium-density apartments where height is restricted to three storeys.

Mr. Oliver said today the site covers 6½ acres and the development would cost "at least" $1 million.

No children would be allowed in what was described as a "better-class apartment."

REZONING ASKED

In another major project, a $4,000,000 townhouse development for Gordon Head reported in the Times Tuesday, Saanich has received application for rezoning.

Exact location of the project has not been disclosed by the developer. Diversified Holdings Limited of Edmonton, but it is expected to be near the University of Victoria.

The developer has said the accommodation will be "far above average" with each unit comparing with a $20,000 house. Children will be allowed.

The initial stage, costing $2 million, will provide 120 units of accommodation in groups of four under one roof. Site area covers 16 acres.

Saanich planner Tom Loney said municipal officials met the developer's architect Tuesday afternoon. Further details will be submitted and at that time the application will be considered and forwarded to the Advisory Planning Commission and to council.

The need for various types of apartment development were discussed in the 55-page Plan for the University Area prepared by Mr. Loney in 1965.

He said the university area will continue to attact young families and because of its attractiveness, well-established mature and retired persons and families, as well as many attached to the university.

Appeal Court Reduces Sentence For Beating Wife

A Ladysmith man previously sentenced to two years less a day for beating his wife, today had the sentence reduced to one year by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

Kenneth A. Butterfield, 31, appealed the sentence in Victoria Law Courts through his lawyer John Thorn. He also appealed a sentence of six months for assaulting Brian C. Delcourt but this appeal was dismissed.

Another sentence of one year for threatening Delcourt with a broken bottle was reduced to six months. All present terms are to be served concurrently.

On the conviction for wife beating Mr. Thorn submitted that imprisonment was not the remedy since the accused required psychiatric help. He said the pre-sentence report indicated Butterfield was "a truculent individual who required psychiatric treatment."

In answer to a question by Chief Justic H. W. Davey, Mr. Thorn admitted psychiatric facilities are available in jail. He added that Butterfield had been in prison since June 8 this year.

Bridge to Mainland 'Worth the Cost'

The bill for a Vancouver Island-mainland bridge or tunnel link would be about $200 million, NDP Leader Robert Strachan suggested Wednesday.

He said it would be worth the cost in improving the economy of the island by removing a transportation tariff holding back development.

Mr. Strachan, supporting the byelection campaign call of federal leader T. C. Douglas — who will seek the Nanaimo-Cowichan-the Islands seat — said the federal proposal to spend a similiar amount for smaller Prince Edward Island and the $600 million English Channel tunnel project show such massive land links are possible and worthwhile.

He said the party at this point primarily is stressing the need for a feasibility study of the idea put forward by Mr. Douglas.

Mr. Strachan said besides eliminating a "tariff wall against the movement of goods, a bridge connection would enable Vancouver Islanders to go to ballet, opera, theatre and sports events on the mainland more conveniently.

He said a bridge would at long last fulfill one of the terms under which B.C. joined Confederation in 1871. The promise to build a railway bridge to the island never got beyond an 1873 order-in-council by Sir John A. Macdonald's cabinet designating Victoria as the Pacific terminus of the transcontinental railway.

Council, Board To Co-Ordinate Site Development

Saanich council and Saanich Peninsula school trustees inaugurated a joint committee Wednesday which will co-ordinate development of future school sites and surrounding lands.

Under terms of reference approved at the first meeting, three representatives from each body together with administrators will meet twice yearly to forestall clashes in council and school board development policies.

Because the committee will be dealing with land acquisitions meetings will be closed.

Saanich council already has a similar committee maintaining liaison with the Greater Victoria school board. Both school districts encompass parts of Saanich.

Child, 4, Rolls Into Wasp's Nest

A four-year-old child was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital early today after he rolled into a wasp's nest near his Colwood home.

Raymond McLellan, of 1061 Haslam, was treated and later discharged. Hospital officials said the boy was not badly hurt in the incident.

Totem Poles Confiscated But Charges Dismissed

Charges that three Americans, including a New York anthropologist, illegally removed totems from an historic Haida village on the Queen Charlotte Islands, were dismissed there Wednesday.

Charges were laid after RCMP confiscated a number of primitive Indian art pieces from a chartered boat in the Islands.

Charged were Adelaide Demenil and Dr. Edmond Snow Carpenter of New York City and Clinton Helvey of Connecticut, police said.

They were tried under Section 90 of the Indian Act for removal of totem poles and grave carvings from reserve lands.

Magistrate Jack Fraser of Sandspit said today he dismissed the charges on grounds of intent. He declined to explain his reasons, saying only "I listened to all the evidence given and on the basis of the evidence I felt it should be dismissed on those grounds."

GRAVE MARKERS

Included in goods confiscated by police were sawed fragments of a large totem pole and a number of grave markers. Indications are the carvings were taken from the abandoned village of Skedans some 25 miles southeast of Charlotte City.

Sources indicate that in the open market, the carvings in police custody could bring $10,000.

The Wednesday night trial lasted until nearly midnight.

Early testimony was presented by two hereditary chiefs of the Skedans village, one aged 78 and the other 83.

Police testimony was called and a voir-dire — a trial within a trial — was held to determine whether a statement from one of the accused was admissible evidence.

Immediately after the voir-dire, Magistrate Fraser questioned Dr. Carpenter.

The anthropologist said he intended to give the carvings to a museum to preserve them from decay. The magistrate dismissed the case.

The dismissal was granted before the final crown witness, provincial museum anthropologist Peter McNair was called to give testimony.

Crown counsel was Cunliffe Barnett of Prince Rupert. Appearing for the defence was Alan Macdonnell, also of Prince Rupert.

Dr. Carpenter's party left Sandspit by air this morning before they could be reached for comment.

The charge is an unusual one and it is believed the first time it has been tried in British Columbia.

Totems and grave markers are owned by the village bands and, under their hereditary system, are more or less personal property of the chiefs.

Magistrate Fraser ordered the goods to be turned over to the chief and council of Skidegate village, descendants of Skedans, to be disposed of. Either they will be returned to the Skedans site or sent to the National Museum in Ottawa.

Mr. McNair said this morning that plundering of reserve lands "has been going on for a long time."

He said a strong feeling is growing among provincial authorities and the Indians themselves that the artifacts "have to be protected."

BIG PRICES

A university anthropologist said in an interview the New York and London markets for primitive art have "skyrocketed in the last few years."

He said it was allied with the spiralling money-value of art and the growing appreciation of the primitive carved works of Canada's coastal Indians as "a very romantic and highly respected" form.

The accepted method for private and institutional collectors gathering the works is to make an agreement with the band that owns them.

The general feeling among museum officials is that the remaining works should be removed to museums where they can be adequately preserved and, in some cases refinished, rather than being "left to be crumbled to dust," he said.

Above all, he said, they should never be permitted to leave the province—not even to go to the Ottawa museum.

There is a movement among persons who are studying primitive cultures of the coastal Indians that the wisest move for the bands would be to establish their own museums.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Activity lessened toward the close today of trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, but the trend of declining prices continued.

Only the November and January rapeseed futures were not caught in the downward price trend.

Flax futures prices dropped sharply, up to five cents, on commission house selling attracting a scarcity of buyers.

The rapeseed prices were kept firm to buoyant on exporter interest. Rye was easier on light commission house trade and some inter-month spreading. Oats was fractionally easier on thin domestic shipper buying for eastern feeders and barley posted sharp declines on thin buying.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IWA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Industrials Turn Lower

Interrupting a seven-day advance industrials turned lower on the Toronto stock market today. Brokers said the break in the rally was due to weakness in New York. However, other sections of the market were steady.

Resuming trading after a one-day holiday Wall Street issues churned irregularly at the start and then assumed a lower trend.

AT TORONTO Leigh Instruments lost 1¼ to 38, Falconbridge 1 to 94, Great West Saddlery 2 to 15, Koffler Stores ⅞ to 35¼, Levy ½ to 29¼, Auto Electric ⅝ to 18¼.

Among the heaviest traders, Security Capital B jumped 72 cents to $5.36, Capital Building 17 cents to $5.12 and Brazilian Light ½ to 20¼. Bramalea lost ⅜ to 12⅞.

Galt Malleable Iron was up 1⅛ to 13, United Westburne 1 to 10¼ and Hayes-Dana 1 to 13.

Patino Mining slipped ⅛ to 34⅝ after dippig to 33⅛.

Trading in United Canso, which fell 15 cents to $6.35, was delayed at opening to match orders. Asamera lost 20 cents to $8.50 and Trans-Prairie Pipelines ⅜ to 11. Western Decalta was unchanged at $4.85.

AT NEW YORK—Avco sprang to the top of the most-active list on a monster trade of 504,900 shares at 45½, off 2¼.

Global marine opened late on a block of 116,000 shares, down 14⅜ at 40, trimming about 1⅛ from the loss in later dealings.

Among other active stocks, Avnet dropped about 3 and Olin Mathieson a point or more, while Atlantic Richfield advanced more than 2.

M-G-M advanced about 3 points while Martin-Marietta, Chrysler, Illinois Central and General Motors rose more than a point.

AT MONTREAL — Industrials and utilities slid in moderately active trading today on the stock market. Banks and papers edged up.

Freiman fell 1⅛ to 10, Calgary Power ½ to 24 and Simpsons ¼ to 37⅝. Massey-Ferguson, Bell Canada and CPR lost ⅜ each to 16⅝, 46½ and 64⅝ respectively.

Famous Players climbed 2½ to 61½ and United Weston B 1¼ to 10½. Sherwin-Williams, Velcro and Bruck B added 1½ each to 22½, 50 and 14.

In senior mines and oils, Home A gained 1¼ to 25, Home B 2 to 28 and Hudson Bay Mining 1 to 60. Falconbridge dropped 1¾ to 93¼ and Denison 1 to 72.

AT LONDON, modest selling developed on the stock market today and prices eased slightly on end-account profit-taking and the Bank of England's repeated call for restraint.

Government funds firmed on better sterling sentiment.

In dollar stocks, Canadian issues firmed in line with Wednesday's market trend in Montreal and Toronto.

AT VANCOUVER, EDP fell $2.50 to $24 in pre-noon trading today.

New Information System N.Y. Plan

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Plans for a special communications network to facilitate trading in large blocks of stock were revealed Wednesday by Gustave L. Levy, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange board of governors.

Addressing a meeting of life insurance executives in Chicago, Levy said the system—which has a target date of late 1969—would "enable large-block traders, with the aid of their brokers, to exchange information on buying and selling interests, to learn where potentially available stock is held and to speed the execution of large-block orders on the exchange floor."

The information system—at the moment strictly a working tool—could prompt more active discussion of a two-tiered market for stocks—one market for institutional traders and one for the public—with the two tied together electronically.

Although there was no mention of such a set-up in Levy's speech, some Wall Street leaders feel that the rapid growth of institutional trading will eventually force such a system. The current method of handling odd-lot trades (orders for less than 100 shares), by which the small transactions are executed outside the normal auction market, has been cited as a good example of the system that might develop.

Institutional sources, according to Levy, currently account for about 50 per cent of NYSE trading, excluding transactions by members for their own accounts. The institutions' share of trading has been growing steadily for a number of years, prompting some fear that it may overpower individual trading.

Agriculture Trade Shows Sharp Drop

ROME (AP)—World trade in agriculture dropped again sharply last year, and under-developed nations once more were the most seriously affected by the decline, the UN Food and Agriculture organization reported.

Total trade fell by five per cent because of lower export volume and prices, which sent foreign exchange earnings of the under-developed countries downward for the second straight year.

Some commodities such as cotton, cocoa, rice, tea, sugar, beef and dairy products enjoyed substantial gains in trade but under-developed countries were unable to take advantage of the boom because of short supply.

The UN organization gave the following forecasts for commodities this year:

—Wheat: Good crop expected in both developing and developed nations, with volume of trade remaining around 50,000,000 to 52,000,000 tons.

—Coarse grains: Lower production in Northern Hemisphere but larger import demand and price increases expected.

—Rice: Recovery in current 180,000,000-ton harvest (Communist China excluded) will ease a shortage, caused by bad Asian crops—but prices will remain high.

—Fats and oils: Production will continue to rise, especially in liquid edible oil.

—Butter: Situation will remain precarious, with much of the present 450,000 tons of stock staying put.

—Skim milk, cheese: Large supplies will continue to depress international prices.

—Meat: World growth in main categories should slow, partly because Argentina, Uruguay and Australia shipped less beef in 1967 due to reduced export availabilities.

—Eggs: No excess expected because low prices in 1967 checked the expansion of production in several countries.

—Sugar: Production and consumption are expected to remain in reasonable balance. Last year, stocks depressed prices.

—Tea: Output will be reduced in Asia, but not in Africa where production costs are lower.

—Bananas: Trade should increase in 1968, and prices may fall if expansion programs in producing countries are fully achieved.

—Citrus fruit: Production should recover in 1968 and 1969, but marketing difficulties might increase in importing countries particularly in the European Common Market.

—Tobacco leaf: Output should remain unchanged, with United States farm quotas below 1967, larger crops from Canada and India, and reduced production in Greece and Turkey.

—Cotton: World production will rise.

—Forestry products: Will depend largely on U.S. economic situation. Demand for construction material should rise there and in other countries. Excess capacity for chemical pulp and newsprint remains.

—Fishmeal and oil: Should recover along with the frozen ground-fish industries. Smaller catches may be ahead.

Fund Admits Getting Tip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The institutional investors charged by the staff of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission with having made improper use of "insider" information, acknowledged Wednesday it sold 6,000 shares of Douglas Aircraft Co. stock after obtaining a tip.

But it would be an "unauthorized and illegal exercise of power" by the SEC to interpret this as a violation of the securities laws or SEC regulations, the mutual fund said in a reply filed with the commission.

The SEC division of trading and markets has alleged that the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith tipped Madison Fund and 14 other big investors in 1966 that Douglas was about to announce a worsening of its earnings position.

Automated Train System on View

PEACE RIVER, Alta. (CP)—An automated train system was demonstrated publicly by the Canadian National Railways today on the Great Slave Lake Railway near this northwestern Alberta community.

The system, which by means of a computer regulates routine functions of train locomotives, is being tested by the CNR on the Great Slave Railway for modifications to withstand northern conditions.

The experimental system regulates power and braking functions by means of a computing device mounted on the locomotive and coils positioned at strategic points between the rails.

'Newspapers Give Immediate Impact'

TORONTO (CP)—Advertisers prefer to use newspapers rather than any other media for launching new products because they give immediate impact, an advertising executive said Wednesday.

Harvesting Conditions Improved

OTTAWA (CP) — Good weather this week has improved harvesting conditions on the Prairies, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

Swathing is in full swing throughout Alberta and Saskatchewan but combining is still delayed by cool, wet weather. Excessive rain in Manitoba has damaged crops extensively.

The report, last of the 1968 series of telegraphic reports on crop conditions across Canada, estimates wheat will be low-grade. Insufficient threshing has been done to assess the effect of the weather on average yields.

The information on which the report is based was gathered by a selected list of crop correspondents across the country and was telegraphed to Ottawa Tuesday night.

Last week the bureau reported a possible near-record wheat crop of 649,000,000 bushels but even then farmers were concerned that wet weather would lower grades and delay harvesting.

Agriculture Minister Olson made a quick trip to the Prairies during the weekend to assess the situation.

SATISFACTORY

Conditions throughout the remainder of the country are satisfactory, the bureau said.

In the Maritimes, recent rains have improved pastures and field crops. The potato harvest is light and blueberries and apples are small due to dry weather.

Quebec reports good yields of sugar beets and corn for grain. Pastures and hay are good and livestock are in good condition.

Wet, cool weather has delayed harvesting in British Columbia and grain yields are down.

A heavy potato crop is expected in coastal areas of British Columbia. Apples are good but peaches have been slow maturing due to cool weather.

Gilbey Appointment

Former Victoria hotel manager G. Nick North has been appointed western Canada marketing manager for Gilbey Canada Ltd. and will be located in Vancouver.

Mr. North resigned after six years as manager of Western International Hotels Ltd. Imperial Inn to devote himself to private interests. Prior to that he had been with other Western Hotels in Canada, the U.S. and Mexico. He was an honors graduate of Cornell University's hotel management course.

Transair Split

WINNIPEG (CP) — Harold C. Cope said he resigned as president of Transair Ltd. last week over policy differences between management and some directors.

He added: "There was an honest difference of opinion as to the timing of the acquisition of future equipment requirements."

Mr. Cope said the board of directors of the Winnipeg-based airline wanted to obtain aircraft to meet current marketing challenges for northern service. They wanted to be in a position to take advantage of traffic developments.

To meet the demand, Transair has purchased two Japanese-made YS-11 turbo-prop aircraft.

Clyne Seeks Pacific Bloc

TORONTO (CP) — A Canadian lumber executive called today for inclusion of Japan in a Canada, the United States, free trad area involving Canada, the United States, Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand.

J. V. Clyne, chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., told the Canada-Japan Trade Council that such a move would bring advantages in resources, markets and industrial strength.

Said Mr. Clyne:

"If the United Kingdom does not join the EEC (European Economic Community) then a very good argument can be made for a formation of a free trade area between the United States, the United Kingdom and Canada.

"But the United States and Canada face not only the Atlantic Ocean, but the Pacific, and both oceans have similar attractions as avenues of trade . . . We should start our forward planning before it is too late."

Mr. Clyne also called for an end to "persuasion" used by Canada and the U.S. "to cause Japan to impose voluntary restraints on some of her own industries which are deemed competitive with ours."

Ford Will Produce New Car in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. will build a new car at its St. Thomas, Ont., plant, Henry Ford II, chairman of the parent Ford Motor Co., says.

There have been several reports recently that Ford was planning to introduce a new, smaller car to compete in North American markets with European and Japanese imports.

Molson Industries

Senator Hartland deM. Molson was named chairman of the board of Molson Industries Ltd. Wednesday, the new name of Molson Breweries Ltd.

D. M. Chenoweh is vice-chairman of the executive committee, and D. G. Willmot was appointed president and chief executive officer.

Senator Molson was chairman of the board of Molson Breweries Ltd. and Mr. Chenoweth was president. Mr. Willmot was president of Anthes Imperial Ltd., recently acquired by Molson's.

Molson Industries Ltd. will be structured into three operating groups: brewing, Canadian industrial and international industrial.

CNR Appointment

Donald F. Purves has been appointed vice-president of the mountain region, Canadian National Railways, effective Oct. 1.

Mr. Purves will replace G. R. Graham who is retiring after eight years as regional vice-president.

Mr. Purves is a commerce graduate of the University of British Columbia and received a masters degree in science from Columbia University.

Discovery Mines

Norman Byrne, a consulting engineer for Discovery Mines Ltd. of Toronto, says the company will close its operation near Yellowknife by June, 1969.

He said the mine was for years one of the richest gold producers in the world, "but now we've run out of gold."

Total production in its 18 years was just over 1 million ounces of gold valued at $36.08 million.

Mr. Byrne said the company may develop its nearby Camlaren property.

Sawmill Moving

EVERETT (AP) — A Washington sawmill will move to Tahsis because of pressure of the Japanese log market.

Washington Timber Products said the high cost of logs is forcing shutdown of the Everett mill due to "a lack of quality logs at prices the mill can afford to purchase—a condition caused by the heavy drain in Washington timber by Japanese . . ."

Tahsis Pulp and Paper Co. said in Vancouver the company plans to lease land for the U.S. firm and supply it with cedar logs. Details are being negotiated.

The mill, employing up to 130 at an annual payroll cost of $650,000, has been operating 21 years. It will close about Dec. 1, leaving a planing mill and dry kiln in operation.

Sterling Soon Extinct

By CARL HARTMAN

BRUSSELS (AP) — The story is unfolding of how Britain will carry along the painful process of putting an end to the historic role of its pound as a leading currency in the world.

Some day, if all goes well, the pound will merge with the French and Belgian francs, the West German mark, the Dutch guilder and the Italian lira to form a new, strong European monetary unit. That would probably be the kind of money that smaller countries would gladly hold in their reserves.

The day is still far off. As long as Charles de Gaulle runs France, Britain's chances of joining the European Common Market are small.

Today 33 countries and colonies still use the pound as their main international trading unit. Besides most of the Commonwealth these include Israel and a number of Arab and some Asian countries. They are not happy about it.

When Britain devalued the pound last November, the value of their reserves dropped 14.3 per cent overnight. They don't want that to happen again.

RUSH TO SELL

Prime Minister Wilson's government doesn't mind shucking some of its responsibilities. Every time there is a new devaluation scare, or any financial news that makes other money look more attractive, there is a rush to sell pounds.

Often the Bank of England has to come into the market as a buyer to keep the price from going below the new post-devaluation minimum figure of $2.3825 U.S. to the pound. Britain has to sell its own gold or dollars when it does this, slimming its reserves.

The beginning of a way out was settled in Basel, Switzerland, this week. Central banks of 12 countries, led by the United States and West Germany, agreed to a $2,000,000,000 credit. It will enable the sterling area countries to get rid of some holdings and obtain a guarantee on the rest without hurting Britain too much.

When India, for example, earns dollars in world trade, it need no longer change them into pounds. It will be encouraged to deposit the dollars with the Bank for International Settlements in Basel. Gradually, India will find itself holding more dollars and fewer pounds.

Britain will be able to borrow dollars from the bank for its own needs. If the bank does not have enough, it will borrow in turn on Europe's lively Eurodollar market.

BORROW IN PINCH

In a pinch, the international bank can borrow from the 12 countries, including Canada, which have guaranteed the credit, though officials hope this will never be necessary.

At the end of three years, under the present scheme, the books on the deal will be closed. In the following seven years Britain will have to repay the dollars it has borrowed, with interest probably six or seven per cent depending on rates in the Eurodollar market.

Meanwhile, India and other sterling area countries likely will hold on to some of their pounds. To encourage this, Britain is guaranteeing them pounds to make up the difference between the value of the pound before and after any new devaluation.

They will have two other reasons for holding onto pounds.

They need quite a few for current trade, since a considerable commerce seems likely to be carried on in pounds for some years to come. Also they get better interest rates on pounds than on dollars.

How many million pounds of sterling-area holdings will be liquidated depends on the future of Britain's own economy.

If British exports go up and imports come down, the pound will be more stable and still attractive to other countries. If the reverse happens, there will be fears of new instability and new flight from the pound.

Cash for Britain

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — The Bank for International Settlements this week begins raising funds to make the $2 billion standby granted to Britain Monday fully operative.

The plan was drawn up by the central bankers of 12 nations and approved by the BIS Monday. Three methods have been indicated for raising the standby credit. These will have to be applied in the order suggested.

If the first two methods fail in part or altogether, the third method will be applied either partially or totally as circumstances demand.

The methods are:

1. The Bank of England will invite all holders of dollars balances in the sterling area to deposit them with the BIS in Basel.

The BIS will pay market rates for such deposits as long as they are in its possession. It will use these dollars as necessity arises to cover demands for convertibility coming from the sterling area under the standby guarantee.

2. If the first method doesn't work at all, or if it only helps raise part of the sum required, then BIS will borrow money from national markets, or possibly the Eurodollar market as well, and issue bills of exchange for the amounts borrowed.

3. If those methods still don't produce all the amount required to fund the standby, then BIS will fall back on the central banks, which will provide the rest of the money up to $2 billion.

U.S. Sold France Huge Gold Stock

WASHINGTON (AP) — France's hush-hush sale of gold to the United States in June turns out to have been far larger than speculation indicated.

The upper limit of guesses as to the size of the sale, necessitated to bolster the franc, was about $100 million.

But the U.S. treasury department's quarterly report on monetary gold transactions, released Tuesday, showed the actual figure to be $220 million.

Starting in 1962, France embarked on an aggressive policy of buying U.S. gold, coming around every month to exchange the dollars it held for bullion.

This eventually settled down to a pattern of purchasing at least $34 million every month, an outflow that seriously hurt the level of U.S. gold holdings.

But the French were able to keep up the pace only until September, 1966, when they stopped buying.

HALTED BUYING

From then until June the French government had no gold transactions with the United States.

The big June sale was caused by the French need to restore the value of the franc and make it convertible into other currencies at the rate insisted on by the International Monetary Fund.

Mutual Fund Bill Staggered

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON — A House commerce subcommittee has leveled an all but lethal blow at legislation providing greater regulation of the mutual funds industry.

In a surprise 4-2 vote, the subcommittee voted to not consider the bill further. It has been already passed by the Senate. Unless the full committee over-rules the subcommittee, and decides to take it up, the legislation will be a dead issue for the balance of the 90th Congress and perhaps for a long time to come.

The news cast a pall over the Securities and Exchange Commission which has been battling the mutual fund industry to achieve a greater measure of control over sales charges and management fees.

The SEC contends that the legislation is crucial to provide "A fairer shake" for thousands of less sophisticated investors who put their money in mutual funds. The industry, on the other hand, has fought the SEC every step of the way, and had succeeded in persuading the Senate to water down the SEC's original proposals.

As passed by the Senate, the bill:

- Gave authority to fix sales charges (commissions) to the National Association for Securities Dealers (the industry's self regulatory body) with the SEC in a supervisory role.
- Gave authority to the SEC to go to court to determine "reasonableness" of fees charged to the mutual funds by those who manage their assets.
- Provided that deductions for sales charges be limited to 20 per cent in any year and 64 per cent over the first four years.

Rep. John Moss (D—Calif.), chairman of the subcommittee, sharply criticized the action of the group. He called it "a complete abdication of legislative responsibility."

The only way in which the proposal can now be brought to the floor would be through a favorable consideration by the full committee, headed by Rep. Harley O. Staggers (D—W. Va.).

U.S. Eyes Canada For Fuels

QUEBEC CITY (CP) — The United States is likely to turn increasingly to Canada as a source of industrial fuels—including coal—as U.S. resources dry up, Washington economist Milton F. Searl told Canadian coalmen today.

Mr. Searl, chief economist with the U.S. federal energy policy staff, outlined problems in estimating future power needs and resources. He spoke at the opening session of the annual federal-provincial conference on coal.

Estimates by experts vary widely, he said. Forecasts of the growth of energy needs in the United States during the next three decades range between 70 per cent and 200 per cent, while the highest estimate of fossil-fuel resources—petroleum and coal—is five times the lowest.

Regardless of which figures are correct, Mr. Searl said, it seems likely the United States will have to start importing "large amounts" of fuels within the next decade or two.

"Canada appears to be a promising source for some of our increased needs," he said.

With fuel resources probably equal to those of the United States but with only one-tenth the population, Canada should have a good surplus for export, Mr. Searl said.

"Although I have been thinking largely of fluid fuels and uranium, I understand that there is a definite possibility of high-grade Canadian coal competing in the western United States. . . .

"There are also opportunities in the field of electrical energy for co-ordination, pooling, exchanges and sale of power."

Text of the speech was released in advance of delivery.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Industrials Turn Lower

Interrupting a seven-day advance industrials turned lower on the Toronto stock market today. Brokers said the break in the rally was due to weakness in New York. However, other sections of the market were steady.

Resuming trading after a one-day holiday Wall Street issues churned irregularly at the start and then assumed a lower trend.

AT TORONTO—In industrials, A.G.F. Management fell 2 to 52, Leigh Instruments 1¾ to 37½, CPR 1½ to 63¼, Great West Saddlery 1⅛ to 15⅞ and Inco ⅝ to 39⅞. Great West Life gained 2¼ to 74¼, Bartaco 1⅝ to 16⅝ and Alexander Wood 1½ to 9.

Canadian Superior Oil was up 3 to 52, Worldwide Energy 75 cents to $8.00 and Canadian Gridoil ⅝ to 13½. Asamera dropped 30 cents to $8.40.

AT NEW YORK—Avco sprang to the top of the most-active list on a monster trade of 504,900 shares at 45½, off 2¼.

Global marine opened late on a block of 116,000 shares, down 14¾ at 40, trimming about 1½ from the loss in later dealings.

Among other active stocks, Avnet dropped about 3 and Olin Mathieson a point or more, while Atlantic Richfield advanced more than 2.

M-G-M advanced about 3 points while Martin-Marietta, Chrysler, Illinois Central and General Motors rose more than a point.

AT MONTREAL — Industrials and utilities slid in moderately active trading today on the stock market. Banks and papers edged up.

Freiman fell 1⅛ to 10, Calgary Power ½ to 24 and Simpsons ¼ to 37⅝. Massey-Ferguson, Bell Canada and CPR lost ⅜ each to 16⅝, 46½ and 64⅜ respectively.

Famous Players climbed 2½ to 61½ and United Weston B 1¼ to 10½. Sherwin-Williams, Velcro and Bruck B added 1½ each to 22½, 50 and 14.

In senior mines and oils, Home A gained 1¼ to 25, Home B 2 to 28 and Hudson Bay Mining 1 to 60. Falconbridge dropped 1¾ to 93¼ and Denison 1 to 72.

AT LONDON, modest selling developed on the stock market today and prices eased slightly on end-account profit-taking and the Bank of England's repeated call for restraint.

Government funds firmed on better sterling sentiment.

In dollar stocks, Canadian issues firmed in line with Wednesday's market trend in Montreal and Toronto.

AT VANCOUVER, EDP fell $2.50 to $24 in pre-noon trading today.

Captain International was active in the industrials and gained .50 to $12.37 on 25,100 shares.

The mining section was again strong and active. Buttle was .06 better at $1.27 on 89,000 shares, Cons. Skeena rose .09 to $1.45 on 66,500 shares and Lytton Minerals put on .20 to $2.25.

New Information System N.Y. Plan

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Plans for a special communications network to facilitate trading in large blocks of stock were revealed Wednesday by Gustave L. Levy, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange board of governors.

Addressing a meeting of life insurance executives in Chicago, Levy said the system—which has a target date of late 1969—would "enable large-block traders, with the aid of their brokers, to exchange information on buying and selling interests, to learn where potentially available stock is held and to speed the execution of large-block orders on the exchange floor."

The information system—at the moment strictly a working tool—could prompt more active discussion of a two-tiered market for stocks—one market for institutional traders and one for the public—with the two tied together electronically.

Although there was no mention of such a set-up in Levy's speech, some Wall Street leaders feel that the rapid growth of institutional trading will eventually force such a system. The current method of handling odd-lot trades (orders for less than 100 shares), by which the small transactions are executed outside the normal auction market, has been cited as a good example of the system that might develop.

Institutional sources, according to Levy, currently account for about 50 per cent of NYSE trading, excluding transactions by members for their own accounts. The institutions' share of trading has been growing steadily for a number of years, prompting some fear that it may overpower individual trading.

Only the November and January rapeseed futures were not caught in the downward price trend.

Flax futures prices dropped sharply, up to five cents, on commission house selling attracting a scarcity of buyers.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IWA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged.

Fund Admits Getting Tip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The institutional investors charged by the staff of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission with having made improper use of "insider" information, acknowledged Wednesday it sold 6,000 shares of Douglas Aircraft Co. stock after obtaining a tip.

But it would be an "unauthorized and illegal exercise of power" by the SEC to interpret this as a violation of the securities laws or SEC regulations, the mutual fund said in a reply filed with the commission.

The SEC division of trading and markets has alleged that the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith tipped Madison Fund and 14 other big investors in 1966 that Douglas was about to announce a worsening of its earnings position.

Harvesting Conditions Improved

OTTAWA (CP) — Good weather this week has improved harvesting conditions on the Prairies, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Wednesday.

Swathing is in full swing throughout Alberta and Saskatchewan but combining is still delayed by cool, wet weather. Excessive rain in Manitoba has damaged crops extensively.

The report, last of the 1968 series of telegraphic reports on crop conditions across Canada, estimates wheat will be low-grade. Insufficient threshing has been done to assess the effect of the weather on average yields.

The information on which the report is based was gathered by a selected list of crop correspondents across the country and was telegraphed to Ottawa Tuesday night.

Last week the bureau reported a possible near-record wheat crop of 649,000,000 bushels but even then farmers were concerned that wet weather would lower grades and delay harvesting.

Agriculture Minister Olson made a quick trip to the Prairies during the weekend to assess the situation.

SATISFACTORY

Conditions throughout the remainder of the country are satisfactory, the bureau said.

In the Maritimes, recent rains have improved pastures and field crops. The potato harvest is light and blueberries and apples are small due to dry weather.

Quebec reports good yields of sugar beets and corn for grain. Pastures and hay are good and livestock are in good condition.

Wet, cool weather has delayed harvesting in British Columbia and grain yields are down.

A heavy potato crop is expected in coastal areas of British Columbia. Apples are good but peaches have been slow maturing due to cool weather.
